

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

MAR 2 1949

36,393

51

JACOB BEN CHAJIM IBN ADONIAH'S

INTRODUCTION

TO

THE RABBINIC BIBLE,

HEBREW AND ENGLISH;

WITH EXPLANATORY NOTES.

BY

CHRISTIAN D. GINSBURG, LL. D.

Second Edition.

LONDON:

LONGMANS, GREEN, READER, AND DYER.

1867.

C

הקרמת

יעקב בן חיים ן אדוניהו

הנמצאת

במקראות גדולות

הנקראות בשם שער יחזה הקדוש דפוס וויניציא שנת תרפ"ו

עם היקונים שונים

על פי מקראות גדולות דפוס הש"ז ודפוס השכ"ח

ונוסף

עליה תרגום, באור, ותולדת המחבר

בשפת ענגליש

מאת אוהב שפת קודש ומכבד מכבדיה

כריסטיאן דוד גינצבורג

לונדון

שנת תר"כ

TO

FRIEDRICH LUDWIG LEOPOLD HAUSBURG,

I affectionately Inscribe this Work,

CHRISTIAN D. GINSBURG.

PREFACE.

SINCE the publication of the first edition of Jacob b. Chajim Ibn Adonijah's Introduction to the Rabbinic Bible, with an English Translation, I have spent two years of almost uninterrupted study in Massoretic lore. When, therefore, called upon to issue a second edition, I determined to embody in it as much of the results of my researches as was required to elucidate the text and the translation.

The principal alterations in this edition are as follow :
i. The present text is a reprint of the editio princeps (Venice, 1525), which I did not possess at first—carefully collated with the editions of 1546–48, 1568, 1617–19, 1619, and 1724–27. ii. The text has been carefully punctuated throughout. iii. The translation has been thoroughly revised and improved. iv. The Hebrew and the English are printed in parallel columns, so that the book may now be used as a help by those who are desirous to study Rabbinic Hebrew. v. The Annotations have been augmented from forty-two to upwards of a hundred. And vi. A life of Jacob b. Chajim has been added, with an account of the Massorah, and a description of a newly discovered, and very important, MS. of this ancient critico-exegetical apparatus.

If the Christian literary and scientific public should be inclined to manifest that interest in the criticism of the sacred text of the Old Testament which scholars have always evinced in securing correct texts of profane classics, I shall deem it a privilege to devote some years of my life to the publication and annotation of this newly discovered MS.

For the elaborate Indices, I am to a great extent indebted to a friend, whose name I am not at liberty to mention.

BROOKLEA, AIGBURTH ROAD,
LIVERPOOL, October, 1867.

JACOB B. CHAJIM IBN ADONIJAH.

VERY little is known of the life of JACOB BEN CHAJIM IBN ADONIJAH, who rescued the Massorah from perdition, and for the first time collated, compiled, and gave to the world in a printed form the grand critico-exegetical apparatus, bequeathed to us by the Jews of olden times. Even the date and the place of his birth are matters of conjecture, and can only be approximately guessed from the autobiographical fragments scattered through his writings.

In his celebrated Introduction to the Rabbinic Bible, which we publish with an English translation, he tells us that he was a resident of Tunis; and it is concluded, from this remark, that this ancient city was his native place. Hence he is also called Tunisi. Indeed Fürst, who, in his work on Hebrew Bibliography, treats on our author under the name Jacob b. Chajim, has also a second notice of him under Tunisi.¹ It is, however, to be remarked, that Jacob b. Chajim does not call Tunis his native place, but simply says that he resided in it and prosecuted his studies therein.² Nor must we omit to state that he calls himself Jacob Ibn Adonijah, and that this, or simply Ibn Adonijah, is the surname by which he is quoted in the writings of his learned contemporaries.³ But though Ibn Adonijah is the more correct appellation, we shall not entirely discard the name Jacob b. Chajim, because he is better known by it in modern days.

From the fact that Jacob b. Chajim carried through the press of the celebrated Daniel Bomberg, at Venice, the complete editions of the Babylonian and Jerusalem Talmuds, in 1520-1523, it may reasonably be concluded that he was then at least fifty years of age, and that he was born about 1470. Whether his ancestors were among the first and second masses of emigrants from Spain, who successively fled from that accursed country, to escape the fiery persecution consequent upon the successive inflammatory preachings of the fanatical priests, Fernando Martinez (March 15—August 1391), and Vincente Ferrer (1412—1414), and settled down in the North of Africa by thousands; or whether they were among the three hundred thousand who were expelled from Spain in 1492, is difficult to decide. According to the former view, Ibn Adonijah, though of Spanish descent, was born at Tunis, whilst according to the latter, he emigrated with his parents into this city when about twenty-two years of age.

¹ Comp. Bibliotheca Judaica, vol. ii., p. 17, with vol. iii., p. 451.

² שְׁלוּ הָיִיתָ בְּבֵיתִי וְרָעַנְתָּ בְּהִכְלִי שֹׁדֵק עַל לְמֹדֵי בְּשׂוּנִים הַמְדִּינָה אֲשֶׁר קָרַב לָקֶצֶה גְּבוּל קִרְשֵׁנִינָא, והקדמה, vide infra, p. 38.

³ Thus in this Introduction (vide infra, p. 36), and in the Treatise on the Points and Accents which is printed in the upper and lower margins of the Massorah finalis, he calls himself Jacob b. Chajim b. Isaac Ibn Adonijah (אֲדוֹנִיָּהּ בֶּן יִצְחָק בֶּן חַיִּים בֶּן יִשְׂרָאֵל). Levita, in the poem at the end of the Bible, calls him Jacob [Ibn] Adonijah (עַבְדִּי אֲדוֹנִיָּהּ); whilst De Rossi (1513-1577), simply calls him Ibn Adonijah (אֲדוֹנִיָּהּ). Comp. Meor Enajim, part iii., cap. lix., p. 471, ed. Cassel, Berlin, 1867.

Among those whom the cruel edict of Ferdinand and Isabella drove from their peaceful homes, and who sought an asylum at Tunis, were Abraham Saccutto, the celebrated astronomer and historian, and Moses b. Isaac Alashkar, the famous Kabbalist and philosopher. These, together with other distinguished literati, established schools at Tunis, and taught hundreds of students the different branches of Biblical and Talmudic literature. It was among these eminent men, and in their schools, that Jacob b. Chajim prosecuted his Hebrew studies, and acquired his extraordinary knowledge of the Massorah, thus preparing himself for the great work which Providence had in store for him elsewhere.

He was, however, not permitted to continue the enjoyment of his quiet home and peaceful studies under the hospitable protection of the Crescent. The bloody persecutors under the Cross, not satisfied with having deprived the whole Jewish population of Spain of all that is precious to men on earth, carried fire and sword, in the name of Christ, among the Jews who had obtained an asylum in Mohamedan countries, and who were diligently employed in the revival of Biblical literature. This time, however, the crusade was not originally organised against the Jews, but against the Moors, since it was believed to be base ingratitude to the goodness of Providence, which had delivered these infidels into the hands of the Church, to allow them any longer to usurp the fair inheritance of the Christians.

Hence no less a person than Cardinal Ximenes, the distinguished Archbishop of Toledo, resorted to Granada, in 1449, to convert the stiff-necked race of Mohamed; seeing that the rational and benevolent measures adopted by Fray Fernando de Talavera, the Archbishop of that province,—who at an advanced age studied Arabic, and caused a vocabulary, grammar, and catechism to be compiled, and a version of the liturgy to be made in the same tongue,—had produced few proselytes. He first employed arguments and presents; if these failed to convince the Mussulman of the error of his ways, imprisonment, with fetters, and a few days' fasting, soon humbled the unbeliever; so much so, that the devout Ferreras was constrained to exclaim, "Thus did Providence avail itself of the darkness of the dungeon to pour on the benighted minds of the infidel the light of the true faith."⁴

Effectually to extirpate heresy, and to preclude the possibility of the converts returning to their former errors, Cardinal Ximenes caused all procurable Arabic manuscripts to be piled together and burned, in one of the great squares of the city, so as to exterminate the very characters in which the teachings of the infidels were recorded. This outrageous burning of most valuable MSS., relating to all branches of science and literature, was effected by the learned Prelate at the very time that he was spending a princely fortune in the publication of the stupendous Complutensian Polyglott, and in the erection and endowment of the university of Alcalá, which was the most learned in Spain. From the thousands of MSS. destined for the conflagration, Ximenes indeed reserved three hundred, relating to medical science, for his university.

As to the Jews, their doom was sealed. In ordinary warfare it mattered very little to them whether the Christians vanquished the infidels, or the infidels the Christians, since the tribute levied by the conqueror upon the conquered was obtained by stripping the Israelites. In the present instance, however, they saw that those who won the day, and forced their religion by means of the sword upon the vanquished, were the very people from whom they themselves had suffered in an unparalleled degree; and that the victors were simply re-enacting the same deeds abroad which they perpetrated at home, upon those who were out of the pale of the Church. They expected again to be dragged from their peaceful homes in the name of Christ, as soon as the Spaniards had a respite from the Mussulman infidels. Hence when they heard that Ximenes, flushed with success at Granada, had instigated Ferdinand, immediately after the death of Isabella, to organise an expedition against the neighbouring Moslems of Africa, and that Mozarquivir, an important port on the Barbary coast, nearly opposite Carthage, had actually been captured (Sep. 13, 1505), consternation spread among the numerous Jewish communities in the cities of North Africa.

⁴ Prescott, History of the reign of Ferdinand and Isabella, part ii., chap. 6.

The consternation became still greater when they heard that Ximenes, mounted upon a mule, had triumphantly entered Oran (May 17, 1509), preceded by a Franciscan friar, and followed by a cavalcade of brethren of the same monastic order, bearing aloft the massive silver cross, the archiepiscopal standard of Toledo, and banners emblazoned with the Primate's arms on one side, and the Cross on the other. All their fears were more than realised when, after the return of Ximenes to Spain, Pedro Navarro, the general of the army, had vanquished Bugia (Jan. 31, 1510), when Tunis had to capitulate, and when they saw the banner of the Cross floating triumphant from the walls of almost every Moslem city on the Mediterranean. It was then that Jacob b. Chajim, Saccutto, and a host of other eminent Jewish scholars were despoiled of their possessions, banished from their homes and families, interrupted in their most important works in the cause of Biblical literature, and driven to wander in exile.

For more than seven years (1510-1517) Ibn Adonijah roamed about homeless in the different towns of Italy, where at that time Hebrew literature was greatly cultivated and patronised by the highest of the land; and where popes and cardinals, princes and statesmen, warriors and recluses of all kinds were in search of Jewish teachers, in order to be instructed in the mysteries of the Kabbalah. Whether it was owing to his conscientious scruples, which would not allow him to initiate Gentiles into this esoteric doctrine, or to his not having been so fortunate in tuition as his contemporary, Elias Levita, he had at first to endure great privations during his sojourn in Rome and Florence. He at last went to Venice, where the celebrated Daniel Bomberg, of Antwerp, had at that very time established his famous Hebrew press (1516), and through the exertions of R. Chajim Alton, whom he honourably mentions in the Introduction, he at once became connected with the printing office.

The connection of so profound and assiduous a scholar with so cultivated and spirited a publisher proved one of the greatest benefits to Biblical literature, at the time of the Church's greatest need. For whilst the followers of the Prince of Peace were arrayed against each other in deadly conflict, to decide by the sword whether the Bible alone, or the infallible vicar of Christ on earth, is to be appealed to for the rule of faith and practice, Jacob Ibn Adonijah was studiously engaged in the collation of Biblical MSS., in compiling the grand critico-exegetical apparatus of the Old Testament, bequeathed to us by the Jews of olden times, and in editing it, together with the Hebrew Scriptures, the ancient Chaldee paraphrases, and valuable Hebrew commentaries, which has contributed more to the advancement of Biblical knowledge than all the bitter controversies of Catholics and Protestants.

Before, however, we describe this gigantic Rabbinic Bible which has immortalised his name, we have to mention other important works edited by him. It has already been remarked, that Ibn Adonijah must have taken up his abode at Venice soon after Bomberg established in it his celebrated printing office (1516). For we find that the editio princeps of the entire Babylonian Talmud, published by Bomberg in 1520–1523, was partly edited by Jacob b. Chajim; and as the Talmud consists of twelve volumes folio, the preparations for its printing, and the printing itself, must have commenced a considerable time before 1520, when a portion of it was published. Hence his work and connection with Bomberg must have begun about 1517 or 1518. This conclusion is confirmed by the fact that, simultaneously with the appearance of the Babylonian Talmud, Ibn Adonijah also worked at the editio princeps of the Jerusalem Talmud, which he carried through the press in 1522–23, as well as at the editio princeps of R. Nathan's Hebrew Concordance, which appeared in 1523, and over which he must have spent a considerable time.

His assiduity was truly marvellous. He not only carried through the press in three years the first editions of these gigantic works, consisting of fourteen volumes folio, closely printed, both in square Hebrew characters and Rabbinic Hebrew, and replete with references, the very sight of which would astound any one who is not acquainted with them; but, within twelve months after the appearance of the Concordance, he edited, conjointly with David de Pizzighione, the stupendous legal and ritual code of Maimonides, entitled, Mishne Thora (משנה תורה) = Deuteronomy, Second Law, or Jad Ha-Chezaka, (יד החזקה) = The Mighty Hand, in allusion to Deut. xxxiv. 12; and because the work consists of fourteen books (י"ד = 14). To this code, which appeared in 1524, in two volumes folio, Ibn Adonijah wrote an Introduction.

It is perfectly amazing, to find that the editing of these works, which would of itself more than occupy the whole time of ordinary mortals in the present day, was simply the recreation of Jacob b. Chajim; and that the real strength of his intellect, and the vast stores of his learning, were employed at that very time in collecting and collating MSS. of the Massorah, and in preparing for the press the Rabbinic Bible, which is still a precious monument to his vast erudition and almost unparalleled industry, and which was the most powerful auxiliary to the then commencing Reformation. This Rabbinic Bible, which was published in 1524-25, consists of four volumes, folio, as follows:—

I. The first volume, embracing the Pentateuch (תורה), begins—
i. With the elaborate Introduction of Jacob b. Chajim, which we now give for the first time with an English translation;⁵ ii. An Index to the sections of the entire Old Testament according to the Massorah; and iii. Ibn Ezra's Preface to the Pentateuch. Then follow the five Books of Moses in Hebrew, with the so-called Chaldee Paraphrases of Onkelos and Jonathan ben Uzziel, and the Commentaries of Rashi and Ibn Ezra, which are given all round the margin; The Massorah parva, which is in the centre between the Hebrew text and the Chaldee paraphrase; and such a portion of the Massorah magna as the space between the end of the text and the beginning of the commentaries on each page would admit; for which reason this portion obtained the name of Massorah marginalis.

II. The second volume, comprising the Earlier Prophets (נביאים ראשונים), i. e., Joshua, Judges, 1 and 2 Samuel, and 1 and 2 Kings, has the Hebrew text, the Chaldee paraphrases of Jonathan b. Uzziel, the Commentaries of Rashi, David Kimchi, and Levi ben Gershon, the Massorah parva, and that portion of the Massorah magna which constitutes the Massorah marginalis.

III. The third volume, comprising the Later Prophets (נביאים אחרונים), i. e., Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and the Twelve Minor Prophets, has the Hebrew text, the so-called Chaldee paraphrase of Jonathan ben Uzziel, the Commentaries of Rashi, which extend over all the books in the volume of Ibn Ezra on Isaiah and the Minor Prophets, the Massorah parva, and the Massorah marginalis.

⁵ Fürst's assertion (Bibliotheca Judaica, iii. 454), that this introduction had been translated into English, and published by Kennicott in his work entitled The state of the printed Hebrew Text of the Old Testament, Oxford, 1758, is incorrect. Kennicott simply published an abridged and incorrect Latin version, from a MS. which he found in the Bodleian Library.

IV. The fourth volume, comprising the Hagiographa (כְּתוּבִים), i. e., the Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Canticles, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, Esther, Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah, and Chronicles, has the Hebrew text; the so-called Chaldee paraphrases of Joseph the Blind; the Commentaries of Rashi, which only embrace the Psalms, the Five Megilloth (i. e., Canticles, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, and Esther), Ezra, Nehemiah, and Chronicles; the Commentaries of Ibn Ezra, which only embrace the Psalms, Job, the Five Megilloth, and Daniel; the Commentaries of David Kimchi on the Psalms and Chronicles; the Commentaries of Moses Kimchi on Proverbs, Ezra, and Nehemiah;⁶ the Commentaries of Levi ben Gershon on Proverbs and Job; the so-called Commentary of Saadia on Daniel; the Massorah parva, the Massorah marginalis, and the (תְּרֻנוֹת שֵׁנִי) Second Targum on Esther. Appended to this volume are—i. The Massorah, for which space could not be found in the margin of the text in alphabetical order, and which is therefore called the Massorah finalis, with Jacob ben Chajim's directions. ii. A Treatise on the Points and Accents of the Hebrew Scriptures, embodying the work (דְּרָבִי הַנִּיקוּר) (ר' מֹשֶׁה הַנֶּקֶד) of Moses the Punctuator (כָּלְלִי הַנִּיקוּד) or והננינות. iii. The variations between the Western and Eastern Codices, or between the Jerusalem and Babylonian MSS., called חֲלוּפֵי שְׁבִין מַעֲרָבָא וּמִזְרָחָא or חֲלוּף הַמַּקְרָא שְׁבִין בְּנֵי אֶרֶץ יִשְׂרָאֵל וּבֵין בְּנֵי בָבֶל. And iv. The variations between Ben Asher and Ben Naphtali, called חֲלוּפֵי הַתּוֹרָה שְׁבִין בְּנֵי אִשֶּׁר. ובין בני נפתלי.

It is perfectly impossible for any one, but those students who have seen the MSS. of the Hebrew Bible, with the Massorah round the margin, in a most fantastic manner, who have encountered the difficulties in deciphering the hieroglyphic signs, the conceited abbreviations, the strange forms and ornaments into which the writing of the Massorah is twisted, the confusion of the Massoretic notes, &c.; and who have grappled with the blunders which are to be found in almost every sentence, to form an adequate conception of the extraordinary labour and learning which Jacob Ibn Adonijah must have bestowed, in bringing such beautiful order out of such a chaos. His modesty and humility, in speaking of the toil, are becoming his vast erudition.

⁶ The Commentaries on Proverbs, Ezra, and Nehemiah are ascribed, in all the editions of the Rabbinic Bible, to Ibn Ezra. That this, however, is incorrect, and that they belong to Moses Kimchi, is now established beyond the shadow of a doubt. Comp. Reifmann in Literaturblatt des Orients, vol. ii., pp. 750, 751; Zion, vol. i., p. 76; vol. ii., pp. 113-117, 129-133, 155-157, 171-174, 185-188: Frankfort-on-the-Maine, 1841, 1842. Geiger, Oxar Nechmad, vol. ii., p. 17, &c.; Vienna, 1857; Kitto's Cyclopedia of Biblical Literature, s. v. KIMCHI, MOSES.

"Behold," he says, "I have exerted all my might and strength to collate and arrange the Massorah, with all the possible improvements, in order that it may remain pure and bright, and shew its splendour to the nations and princes; for, indeed, it is beautiful to look at. This was a labour of love, for the benefit of our brethren, the children of Israel, and for the glory of our holy and perfect law; as well as to fulfil, as far as possible, the desire of Don Daniel Bomberg, whose expenses in this matter far exceeded my labours. And as regards the Commentaries, I have exerted my powers to the utmost degree to correct in them all the mistakes as far as possible; and whatsoever my humble endeavours could accomplish was done for the glory of the Lord, and for the benefit of our people. I would not be deterred by the enormous labour, for which cause I did not suffer my eyelids to be closed long, either in the winter or summer, and did not mind rising in the cold of the night, as my aim and desire were to see this holy work finished. Now praised be the Creator, who granted me the privilege to begin and to finish this work."⁶ Such is the touching account which Jacob b. Chajim gives us of his labour of love.

Not less striking is the gratitude which he expresses to Bomberg, for having so cheerfully and liberally embarked upon so expensive a work. "When I explained to Bomberg," he tells us, "the advantage of the Massorah, he did all in his power to send into all the countries in order to search out what may be found of the Massorah; and, praised be the Lord, we obtained as many of the Massoretic books as could possibly be got. He was not backward, and his hand was not closed, nor did he draw back his right hand from producing gold out of his purse, to defray the expenses of the books, and of the messengers who were engaged to make search for them in the most remote corners, and in every place where they might possibly be found."⁷

With all our abuse of the Roman Catholics for withholding the Bible from the people, and with all our boasted love for the Scriptures, neither will the Bible Society with its annual income of £80,000, nor will any publisher in this Protestant country of ours, undertake a revised edition of that stupendous work which was published in a ⁶ Vide infra, p. 83, &c.

⁷ Vide infra, p. 77, &c.

Roman Catholic country, when Luther began to make his voice heard in defence of the word of God. Thus it is, that we in the present day are still left to the labours of Jacob b. Chajim, though the results of modern researches, and the discovery of valuable MSS., would enable us to issue a new edition of the critical apparatus of the Old Testament, with important corrections and additions, and in a form more easily accessible to Biblical students.

Bomberg, who took the liveliest interest and the greatest pride in this magnificent edition of the Bible, got Elias Levita, whose fame as a Hebraist was at that time spread not only all over Italy where he resided, but over Germany, both among the most distinguished dignitaries in the Catholic Church and the great leaders of the Reformation, to write an epilogue to the work of his ambition. In this poem, Levita celebrates the praises of the munificent publisher, "who though uncircumcised in the flesh [i. e., a gentile], is circumcised in heart," of "the learned Jacob Ibn Adonijah," who carried it through the press, and of the unparalleled work itself.⁷ Levita was then residing at Rome, in the house of his friend and patron, Cardinal Egidio de Viterbo, where he was diligently engaged in printing his works on the grammar and structure of the Hebrew language, teaching the Roman Catholic and Protestant combatants the original of the Old Testament, and enjoying the literary society of popes, cardinals, princes, ambassadors, and warriors, who were bewitched by the mysteries of the Kabbalah, and little thinking of the misfortunes which were soon to befall him.

Within two years of his writing the epilogue to Jacob Ibn Adonijah's Rabbinic Bible, and whilst engaged on an Aramaic grammar, the Imperialists under Charles V. sacked Rome (May 6, 1527), and in the general work of spoliation and destruction, Levita lost all his property and the greater part of his MSS. In a most destitute and deplorable condition, he left the Eternal city, and betook himself to Venice in the same year (1527); and Bomberg, at whose request he had written the epilogue, at once engaged him as joint corrector of the press and as editor. Thus the two learned Hebraists, Jacob b. Chajim and Elias Levita, who were the great teachers of Hebrew to the greatest men of Europe, at the commencement and during the development of the Reformation, now became co-workers in the same printing office.

⁷ For the different editions of the Bible, and for the alterations which were afterwards made in it, see Kitto's Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature, s.v. RABBINIC BIBLES.

It is more than probable that Levita told Jacob Ibn Adonijah of the Aramaic work on which he was engaged, the MS. of which he lost in the sacking of Rome, and that this exercised some influence on the latter in the choice of his next literary undertaking. For we find Jacob Ibn Adonijah, immediately after Levita's arrival, writing "A Treatise on the Targum" (מאמר על התרגום). It is a matter of dispute whether this Treatise first appeared in Bomberg's edition of the Pentateuch and the Five Megilloth, published in 1527, or in that published in 1543-44, after Jacob Ibn Adonijah's death.⁸ Not possessing the editions in question, I cannot state which opinion is the correct one.

Although no one who is at all acquainted with his assiduity, and who knows what an uncontrollable and inextinguishable passion to continue therein is kindled in the hearts of those who have embarked upon authorship and found their works acceptable, will for a moment doubt that Jacob Ibn Adonijah ever would relinquish his literary pursuits, as long as he possessed his faculties and the use of his limbs; yet, with the exception of one solitary and incidental reference to his work, presently to be mentioned, we henceforth hear nothing more about his productions. Fürst indeed enumerates no less than fifteen important Midrashim and Commentaries on the Bible, which Bomberg published in 1543-47, and which he says may have been prepared for the press by our author.⁹ But this is mere conjecture. I myself possess the very editions of some of the works in question, and though Cornelius Adelkind and Elias Levita are distinctly stated as having been connected with them, Jacob's name is not even mentioned. This, however, may be owing to the change in Ibn Adonijah's religious sentiments, which, as we shall presently see, is more than probable.

⁸ Comp. the article Jüdische Typographie, by Steinschneider and David Cassel, in Ersch and Gruber's Allgemeine Encyclopädie, section II., vol. xxviii., p. 44, note 32, and Professor Luzzatto's Letter (reprinted below, p. 11), and with Fürst, Bibliotheca Judaica, vol. iii., p. 451.

⁹ The works referred to are as follows:—Midrash Rabboth (מדרש רב), Venice, 1545, fol.; Mechilta (מכילתא), ibid. 1545, fol.; Siphra (ספרא), ibid. 1545, fol.; Siphre (ספרי), ibid. 1545, fol.; Midrash Tanchuma (מדרש תנחומא), ibid. 1545, fol.; Midrash Tilim (מדרש תלים), ibid. 1546, fol.; Pisikta Sutratha (פסיקתא ושורתא), ibid. 1546, fol.; Elias Mishrachi's Supra Commentary on Rashi's Comment. on the Pentateuch, called Sepher Ha-Mizrache (ספר מזרחי), ibid. 1545, fol.; Arama's Commentary on the Pentateuch, called Akedath, (עקדת), ibid. 1547, fol.; Ralbag's Commentary on the Pentateuch (רמב"ג על החורו), ibid. 1547, fol.; Abraham Sabba's Kabbalistic Commentary on the Pentateuch, entitled Tzeror Ha-Mer (צירור המור), ibid. 1546, fol.; Nachmanides' Commentary on the Pentateuch (על רמב"ן החורו), ibid. 1548, fol.; Ibn Shemtob's Homiletical Commentary on the Pentateuch (דרשות החורו לנשיב), ibid. 1547, fol.; Jacob Ibn Chibib's Collection of Hagodas, called En Jacob (עני יעקב), ibid. 1546, fol.; R. Solomon b. Abraham b. Aderethe's Theological Answers to Queries (ש"ת דרש'בא), ibid. 1545-6, fol.; R. Moses de Corey's Homiletical work, entitled, The Major Book on the Commandments (סמיג), ibid. 1547, fol. (Comp. Bibliotheca Judaica, vol. iii. p. 452.)

The disappearance of Jacob Ibn Adonijah from the field of active labour in connection with Bomberg, which happened almost simultaneously with the arrival of Levita at Venice, and his appointment as corrector and annotator of the Hebrew works, is most significant, and we believe that it was caused by Ibn Adonijah's relinquishing Judaism.

It is now established beyond the shadow of a doubt, that this eminent Hebraist embraced Christianity about this time. Levita, who had occasion to refer to Adonijah, when writing his exposition of the Massorah (circa 1537-88), not only speaks of him as dead, but intimates that he had avowed the Christian faith some considerable time before he departed this life, and hence descends to unworthy vituperations against him. Referring to the Massorah, edited by Ibn Adonijah, in the celebrated Rabbinic Bible, Levita says, "I have not seen anything like it among all the ancient books, for arrangement and correctness, for beauty and excellence, and for good order. The compiler thereof was one of the learned, whose name was formerly, among the Jews, Jacob. Let his soul be bound up in a bag with holes!"¹⁰ This spiteful perversion of a beautiful, charitable, and reverential prayer, which the Jews use when speaking of or writing about any one of their brethren who has departed this life, in allusion to 1 Sam. xxv. 29, justifies us in assuming that Jacob Ibn Adonijah embraced Christianity several years before 1537.

As the statement in question, in Levita's work, was till lately the only reference to Ibn Adonijah's having embraced Christianity towards the end of his life, the fact was generally unknown, and many of the learned Jews doubted whether the passage in Levita really meant to convey the idea. Amongst those who doubted it, was the erudite Frensdorff. He therefore wrote to the late Professor Luzzatto, asking him the meaning of the passage in question, to which he replied as follows: ¹¹ "As to the meaning of Levita's words, which he wrote in the poetical Introduction to the Massoreth Ha-Massoreth, 'one of the learned, whose name was formerly, among the Jews, Jacob. Let his soul be bound up in a bag with holes;' and your asking me whether I believe it to imply that R. Jacob b. Chajim Ibn Adonijah changed his religion; it is assuredly so. This was the reason why I delayed replying to your letter, for I was greatly perplexed about this subject; since for a truth, from the import of R. Elias Levita's words in question, it is beyond doubt that R. Jacob changed his religion, and I was unwilling to publish this strange report about such a learned man till I found another witness. Now last year, one of my friends, the erudite R. Moses Soave, of Venice, found an edition of the Mishna, with the Commentaries of Maimonides and Shimshon b. Abraham, printed at Venice (Giustiniani), 1546; at the end of Tractate Taharoth was written as follows, which I also saw myself with my own eyes: 'These are the words of the first editor, whose name was formerly, among the Jews, Jacob b. Chajim, and who revised the Tractate Taharoth, with the Commentary of R. Shimshon, of blessed memory. Since, however, the sage said, 'Receive the truth by whomsoever it is propounded,' we deemed it proper to print his remarks here.' Now is peradventure the lie to be given also to this testimony, or is the fact to be established from this witness?

¹⁰ אכן המסורת מהארבע ועשרים. הנדפסות הנה. לא ראיתי כהנה. בכל ספר חקמונים. מסודרים ומתוקנים. ביום ובהורו. ובסוף הסדר. סדרם אחד מהנבונים. היה שמו לפני. בישראל נקרא יעקב. חדי נשמתו צורה בצור נקב. Comp. Massoreth Ha-Massoreth, p. 94, ed. Ginsburg.

¹¹ ולענין דבר הבחור שכתב בהקדמתו החזונית למסורת המסורת "אחד מהנבונים היה שמו לפני. בישראל נקרא יעקב. חדי נשמתו צורה בצור נקב" ששאלת אם אאמין שכונתו לימר שר יעקב בר היום 'א' ארניו המיר דהו-- וראי כן הוא. והדבר הזה היה סבה שנמנעתי מהשיב למכתבך כי הרבה

"Before this, however, happened, I rejoiced as one that findeth great spoil, for I bought a copy of the Pentateuch, with the Targum, printed by Bomberg in 1543-44, at the end of which are seven pages on the Targum, beginning—'Thus saith Jacob b. Chajim b. Isaac Ibn Adonijah,' &c.; as I thought from this it is evident that in the years 1543-44 he was alive, and was still a Jew; and how then could his soul long ago be bound up (i. e. have departed) in the year 1538, when the Massoreth Ha-Massoreth was printed? But when I saw the edition of the Mishna in question, I thought, what am I now to say? and how am I to reconcile it? Surely upon the testimony of two witnesses the man must be executed. Whereupon I concluded that Ibn Adonijah wrote his Treatise on the Targum when still a Jew, and that it had either been already printed when he was alive, in an edition of the Pentateuch which I have not yet seen, or it was not printed in his life-time, but remained for some years in the possession of Daniel Bomberg, till he printed an edition of the Pentateuch, with the Targum, when he also printed at the end the Treatise in question."

הייתי נבון בענין הזה כי אמנם משמעות דברי ר' אליה הנ"ל היא בלא ספק כי ר' יעקב המיר דתו ולא הייתי רוצה להוציא לעו על חכם כמדון גפרים אשכנז עד שני. ואולם בשנה שעברה מצא אחד מירידי המשכיל ר' משה סואני מעיר ריניציאה משניות עם פירוש הר"מ והר"ש דפוס ויניציאה 'יוספינאן' שנת ש"ו ובסוף סדר שחרות כתוב כך 'וכן ראיתי גם אני בעיני' 'ואלה הם דברי המגיד הראשון שהיה שמו לפנינו בישראל יעקב בן חיים שהגיה סדר שחרות עם פירוש רבינו שבסוף ו'ל. ולפי שאמר החכם קבל האמת ממי שאמר ראינו להדפיס דבריו פה'—היהנן להכניס גם העדות הזאת. או להוציא ממשמעות דבריו:

ואני קודם לכן ששתי כמוצא שלל רב כי קניתי חומש עם תרגום דפוס בוכבינד שנת ש"ג וש"ד ובסופו ו' דפים על התרגום. החלום אמר יעקב בן חיים בן יצחק ר' אדניו ישי' עמדי' 'ואמרת' דרי מבואר כי בשנת ש"ג וש"ד היה דו והיה ידו ידו. ואך בשנת רצ"ח (כשנדרס ס' מסרת המסרת) כבר היתה נשמרת צורחה?—אבל כשראיתי המשניות הנ"ל אמרתי מה אדבר? ובמה אצדקה? הלא על פי שנים עדים יומת המת ואז אמרת: אין ספק כי ר' אדניו כתב מאמרו על התרגום כשהיה יהודי. ואולי כבר נדרס בדיוו בחומש אחר שלא בא עדיין לדי' ואולי ג"כ לא נדרס בחייו. אבל נשאר ביד רניאל בוכבינד קצת שנים עד שהדפיס חומש עם תרגום ואז הדפיס המאמר ההוא בסופו. This letter is published in the Hebrew Essays and Reviews, entitled Ozar Nechanad, vol. iii., p. 112, Vienna, 1860.

This fact may perhaps give us the clue to Jacob Ibn Adonijah's sudden disappearance from the field of labour in connection with Bomberg's printing office. The apology of the second editor of the edition of the Mishna in question, for printing, in a work intended for the Jews, opinions propounded by one who had ceased to be a member of the community, seems to imply several things which have hitherto been unknown in connection with the life of Ibn Adonijah. We see from it—i. That he still continued to work for Bomberg after he embraced Christianity. For had Ibn Adonijah revised the Tractate of Mishna in question when he was still a Jew, the future editor would not have found it necessary to apologise for reprinting Ibn Adonijah's opinions; just as the future editors of the Rabbinic Bible did not require to explain why they reprinted his compilation of the Massorah, and the Introduction to the Rabbinic Bible, which he wrote when still a Jew. ii. The fact that Bomberg's works were for the Jews, and that an apology was needed to be made to them for printing the corrections and annotations made by a converted Jew, would of itself show the inexpediency of retaining a Jewish Christian on such works. To conciliate, therefore, the prejudice of his Jewish customers, Bomberg was undoubtedly obliged to part with his old friend Jacob Ibn Adonijah. How bitter this prejudice was against those who embraced Christianity, may be seen from the vituperations uttered against Ibn Adonijah, even by so enlightened a man as Elias Levita. If our conclusions are correct, they will also supply us with the clue to the sudden and mysterious disappearance of Ibn Adonijah's name from nearly all the books printed by Bomberg since the year 1527. However much Ibn Adonijah may have done to them by way of correction and annotation, it was the best trade policy to suppress the name of the converted Jew. Hence Fürst may be perfectly correct in his supposition that Jacob b. Chajim had a share in preparing for the press the fifteen important works already alluded to, though the learned bibliographer neither accounts for, nor mentions, the fact that Ibn Adonijah's name is suppressed.

The precise year in which Ibn Adonijah died has not as yet been ascertained, though it is perfectly certain, from the remarks of Levita already alluded to, that he departed this life before 1538. That the Jews did not record anything connected with his life and death is no matter of surprise, when we remember that he had left their community, and that, in their unparalleled sufferings, the converted Israelites of those days, in their blind zeal, were considerable abettors. But that the Christian writers of those days, both Catholics and Protestants, who thought it worth their while to chronicle and perpetuate events which we cannot read now without blushing, should have passed over in total silence the death of one who had done so much for Biblical literature, and suffered the loss of all things to join the ranks of the followers of Christ, will remain an indelible blot on the gratitude of Christian historians. As far as Ibn Adonijah himself is concerned, he has left a monument behind him in his contributions to Biblical literature, which will last as long as the Bible is studied in the original; and the critical student of the Scriptures can never examine the Massorah, nor look at the gigantic Rabbinic Bible, without feelings of reverence for, and gratitude to, Jacob b. Chajim Ibn Adonijah, who, being dead, yet speaketh.

It now remains that we should advert to the materials from which Ibn Adonijah compiled the Massorah, and to the merits of his compilation. Before, however, this is done, it is necessary to give the reader some idea of the origin, development, import, and transmission of the Massorah. The account must necessarily be very succinct.

Owing to the extreme sacredness with which the letter of the text was regarded, and believing that the multifarious legal enactments which were called forth by the ever-shifting circumstances of the commonwealth, the sacred legends which developed themselves in the course of time, and all the ecclesiastical and civil regulations, to which an emergency may at any time give rise, are indicated in the Bible by a superfluous letter, or redundant word, or the repetition of a phrase, or the peculiarity of a construction, the greatest care has been taken, since the beginning of the Christian era, to mark every peculiarity and phenomenon in the spelling and construction of the words in the Scriptures, so that "one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law."

The duty of noting these peculiarities devolved more especially upon the Scribes, or copyists, who multiplied the Codices of the Bible.¹² As the collation of MSS. for the purpose of producing correct copies was deemed unsafe, inasmuch as the multiplication always gives rise to a multitude of errors; and as, moreover, the process of collation is not only tedious, but demands a number of MSS. belonging to different families, and various ages, the Scribes found it more practicable to count the number of times a word was spelled in an exceptional way, or a peculiar phrase was used, or any anomaly occurred throughout the Bible. The different peculiarities, thus numbered, were rubricated, and formed into separate registers and lists. These were at first committed to memory by the professional Scribes and doctors of the law, and transmitted orally in the schools; but afterwards, like all other traditions, were written down, and now constitute the Massorah (מסורה), = tradition.¹³

Like the science of grammar and lexicography, the Massoretic researches were at first limited. They were confined to the rubrication of words and phrases to which some legal enactment was attached, or which had some caligraphical and orthographical peculiarity. But as the Massoretic schools extended over a millennium,¹⁴ and as the absence of concordances precluded the possibility of discovering at once all the instances in which certain anomalies were to be found, the continued exertions of the Massorites resulted, not only in supplementing and completing the already existing rubrics, but in adding new registers and lists of words, forms, phrases, and combinations, which exhibited the slightest deviation from the ordinary usage. Hence the Massorah, in its present development, embraces almost everything connected with the external appearance of the text. It gives the number of times each letter of the alphabet occurs throughout the Bible. It states how many verses there are in each separate book. It shows which is the middle letter, which the middle word, and which is the middle verse in every book. It registers the majuscular, the minuscular, the inverted, the suspended, and the peculiarly pointed letters, the anomalous forms and phrases, defective and plene, textual and marginal readings, conjectural readings, lexical features, &c.

¹² Hence the remark, לפיכך נקראי הראשונים סופרים שהיו סופרים כל האיות שבתורה, דרש דרש חציון של חיות, והתגלה שהיו אמרים וא"ו דגון חציון של אותיות של ספר תורה. דרש דרש חציון של חיות, והתגלה של פסוקים, כיסמנה חזיר מיער ע"ן דרש חציון של ההלים, והוא דחום יכפר עון חציון דפסוקים: "therefore are the ancients called Sopherim, because they counted all the letters in Holy Writ. Thus they said that the Vav, in גרון [Levit. xi. 42], is the half of all the letters in the Pentateuch; that Resh [ibid. x. 16] is the middle word; and חתולה [ibid. xiii. 33] the middle verse; that Ain, in מיער [Ps. lxxx. 14], is the middle letter in the Psalms; and Ps. lxxvii. 38 the middle verse." Kiddushin, 30 a.

¹³ The expression מסורה, which now denotes all the labours of the Massorites effected during a millennium, is the post-Talmudic form. In the Talmud it is מסורה and originally denoted the traditional pronunciation of the unpointed text. Thus it was transmitted authoritatively that שבועים (Levit. xii. 5) is to be read שבעים, two weeks, and not שבעים, seventy days; and that בולב (Exod. xxiii. 19) is to be pronounced בולב, in the milk, and not בולב, in the fat. Comp. Geiger, Jüdische Zeitschrift, vol. i., p. 90, &c.; vol. iii., p. 79.

¹⁴ This has already been pointed out by Levita; comp. Massoreth Ha-Massoreth, p. 137, ed. Ginsburg.

When the Massorah began to be written down, it assumed a double form. The first form of it is more like an index, simply stating alongside the margin, against the word which exhibits a certain peculiarity, that the word in question is one of such and such a number, possessing the same peculiarity, without giving the other words of the same rubric. This form assumed the name of Massorah parva (מסורה קטנה). The second is the more extensive form. It not only gives all the words which possess the same peculiarity in full, but adds a few words, by which each expression is preceded, or followed, so as to enable the student to recognise, from the connection, in what book the anomaly occurs. This form of it obtained the name of Massorah magna, and is written above and below the text.

As, however, the Massorah constantly increased in bulk in the course of time, extending to every phenomenon of the text, and as the large dimensions it assumed precluded the possibility of its being written entirely above and below the margin of the page to which it referred, the different lists, both alphabetical and otherwise, had to be arranged according to alphabetical or other order, and chronicled in separate works. These books are either called by the general name Massoretic Treatises (ספרי המסרה), or Ochla Ve-Ochla (אכלה ואכלה). The latter appellation the Massoretic Treatises obtained from the first two examples, אָכַלָה (1 Sam. i. 9), וְאָכַלָה (Gen. xxvii. 19), in the alphabetical list of words occurring twice in the Bible, once without and once with Vav, with which the Massorah begins.¹⁵ It must be remarked, however, that in copying the Ochla Ve-Ochla, or the Massorah, the scribes or students did not always transcribe the whole of it. Some portions were omitted as being unimportant, or not being wanted by the transcriber; some were transposed by the students to facilitate reference; whilst other portions were added by those who devoted themselves to this kind of study. Hence obtained different redactions, some called by the general name Massoretic Treatises, and others by the more specific appellation Ochla Ve-Ochla; hence the difficulty of ascertaining the particular redaction meant by the different commentators, lexicographers, and grammarians, who quote the Ochla Ve-Ochla; and hence too the impossibility of specifying particularly the various nameless fragments and forms of the Massorah, used for collation in the compilation of this critico-exegetical apparatus, as edited by Ibn Adonijah.

This impossibility of specifying the nameless fragments, which Jacob Ibn Adonijah realised in the compilation of the Massorah, has recently been construed into a deliberate suppression of the materials which he used, and the sources whence he drew his information. Thus Geiger, in showing the importance of the Massorah to Biblical criticism, and deploring its neglect by commentators and lexicographers, remarks,¹⁶ "Acquaintance with the Massorah, and with the numerous MSS. which contain it in its various forms, has for centuries become so rare, that people did not at all know any more whether the Massorah actually existed in former times, in the form of a comprehensive view, or whether it has been made into such a form for the first time by Jacob b. Chajim, at the end of his edition of the Bible; and whether this whole compilation which he made from the isolated Massorahs, both parva and magna, to be found connected immediately with the text, is exclusively his work. From his words, with which he introduces this work, it does not appear whether he had before him one or more such compilations, nay, on the contrary, it seems as if he claimed for himself this compilation. We can scarcely avoid the suspicion, that the man, whose merit is at all events to be acknowledged as permanent, designedly intended to envelope it in darkness, with the artificial words in which he introduces this work, as well as the grammatical Treatise of Moses Ha-Nakden, in order that it might scarcely be guessed what he had originally before him, and that it should be supposed that he had done far more at it than is actually the case; on the contrary, he would surely have increased his merit if he had told very plainly what sources he used, in what form they were, and how he had worked them up. Nevertheless he omitted to give this information, and the most distinguished literati and collators of MSS. could give no information whether there existed any MS. compilation of the Massorah."

¹⁵ Levita, who made the Ochla Ve-Ochla the basis of his Massoretic researches, plainly declared that it is so called from its beginning words, והקרא נן בעבור והחלול; Massoreth Ha-Massoreth, p. 131. We cannot, therefore, understand why the learned Dr. Steinschneider should be so anxious to claim the originality of this remark. Comp. Geiger's Jüdische Zeitschrift, vol. i., pp. 316, 317, note 31, Breslau, 1862.

¹⁶ Die Bekanntschaft mit ihr, mit den zahlreichen Handschriften, welche sie in ihrer verschiedenen Gestalt enthalten, ist schon seit Jahrhunderten so spärlich geworden, daß man gar nicht mehr wußte, ob denn wirklich früher auch die Massorah in der Gestalt einer umfassenden Uebersicht existirt habe, oder ob sie so erst von Jakob ben Chajim am Ende der Bibelausgabe geordnet worden, diese ganze Zusammenstellung, die er eben aus den vereinzelt unmittelbar neben dem Texte befindlichen kleinen und großen

That this accusation is unmerited, may be seen both from Jacob Ibn Adonijah's Introduction, and from the various notes which he made in different parts of the Massorah finalis. Thus in the passage already quoted,¹⁷ he not only tells us that Bomberg despatched messengers to different countries to search for copies of the Massorah, but distinctly declares that they succeeded in obtaining as many codices as could possibly be secured. These Massorahs, he moreover says, embraced both kinds: First, the Massorahs written in the margin of Maſſorah's vorgenommen, ausschließlich sein Werk sei. Aus seinen Worten, mit denen er diese Arbeit einleitet, geht nicht hervor, ob er eine oder gar mehrere solcher Uebersichten vorliegen gehabt habe, ja es scheint im Gegentheile, als nehme er diese Zusammenstellung für sich allein in Anspruch; wir können uns kaum des Verdachtes erwehren, daß der Mann, dessen Verdienst jedenfalls ein dauernd anzuerkennendes ist, durch die künstlichen Worte, mit denen er dieses Werk, wie das grammatische des Moses ha-Nakden, einleitet, absichtlich ein gewisses Halbbunzel darüber verbreiten wollte, so daß man, was ihm ursprünglich vorgelegen, kaum ahnen könne und man auf die Vermuthung kommen solle, er habe weit mehr dabei gethan, als wirklich der Fall ist. Sicher hätte er sein Verdienst im Gegentheile erhöht, wenn er uns recht genau gesagt hätte, welche Quellen er benützt, welche Gestalt dieselben gehabt und wie er sie verarbeitet. Jedoch er unterließ diese Mittheilung, und die bedeutendsten Kenner und Handschriftenammler wußten von der maſſoretischen Uebersicht, ob sie handschriftlich vorhanden sei, keine Nachricht zu geben. Jüdische Zeitschrift für Wissenschaft und Leben, vol. iii., p. 112, &c. Breslau, 1866.

¹⁷ Vide supra, p. 8, &c.

the Bible, thus constituting what is called the Massorah parva and the Massorah marginalis; and second, separate Massoretic Treatises, or the different redactions of what is called the Ochla Ve-Ochla.

Equally explicit and straightforward are his remarks about the nature of these materials, and the manner in which he elaborated them. We cannot do better than give his own description of the condition of the Massorahs, written in the margins of the Bibles. "After mastering their contents," he says, "I found them in the utmost disorder and confusion, so much so, that there is not a sentence to be found without a blunder: that is to say, the quotations from the Massorites are both incorrect and misplaced; since in those codices in which the Massorah is written in the margin, it is not arranged according to the order of the verses contained in the page. Thus, for instance, if a page has five or six verses, the first of which begins with וַיֹּאמֶר, and he said; the second with וַיִּגַּד, and it was told; the third with וַיְהִי, and it is; the fourth with וַיִּשְׁלַח, and he sent; the fifth with וַיֵּשֶׁב, and she sat: the Massorah commences with the fourth verse, "the word וַיִּשְׁלַח occurs twenty-two times;" then follows verse two, "the word וַיִּגַּד occurs twenty-four times;" and then the fifth verse, "the word וַיֵּשֶׁב occurs fifteen times," without any order or plan. Moreover, most of these [Massoretic remarks] are written in a contracted form, and with ornaments; so much so, that they cannot at all be deciphered, as the desire of the writer was only to embellish his writing, and not to examine or to understand the sense. Thus, for instance, in most of the copies, there are four lines [of the Massorah] on the top of the page, and five at the bottom, as the writer would under no circumstances diminish or increase the number. Hence, whenever there happened to be any of the alphabetical lists, or if the Massoretic remarks were lengthy, he split up the remarks in the middle or at the beginning, and largely introduced abbreviations, so as to obtain even lines."¹⁸

That this is by no means an exaggerated description of the state in which the Massorah, written in the margins of the Bible, was in the days of Ibn Adonijah, may be seen from the account given by Levita, his contemporary and co-labourer in the same department. Levita, who fourteen years later (1538) had to collate it for his Introduction to the Massorah, says, "as for the Massorah, written round the margin in the Codices, it contains numberless errors. The copyists have perverted it, as they did not care for the Massorah, but only thought to ornament their writing, and to make even lines, so as not to alter the appearance, in order that all the pages should be alike. Moreover they ornamented them with illuminations of divers kinds of buds, flowers, &c. Hence they were obliged sometimes to narrow, and sometimes to widen, the margins round the illuminations with words already stated, although they were superfluous, and out of place; whilst the Massoretic registers were entirely omitted from their proper place, because the space did not suffice; and hence they had to break off in the middle of a sentence, thus leaving the whole edifice incomplete, and greatly defective.^{18*}

¹⁸ Vide infra, p. 78, &c.

Thus much for the Massorah, which accompanied the Codices of the Bible, prior to, and after, the time of Ibn Adonijah's compilation. As to the means for collating, correcting, and compiling it, and the extent of his labours, he distinctly tells us that he used different separate redactions of the Massorah, which Bomberg procured, and which he himself possessed. Here, again, we must let Ibn Adonijah speak for himself. "Now," says he, "when I observed all this confusion, I bestirred myself in the first place to arrange all the Massoretic notes, according to the verses to which they belonged; and then to investigate the Massoretic treatises in my possession, apart from what was written in the margins of the Bibles. Wherever an omission or contraction occurred, in order to obtain even lines, or four lines at the top and five lines at the bottom, I at once consulted the Massoretic treatises, and corrected it according to order. And whenever I found that the Massoretic treatises differed from each other, I put down the opinions of both sides, as will be found in the margin of our edition of the Bible with the Massorah, the word in dispute being marked to indicate that it is not the language of the Massorah; and whenever I took exception to the statement in a certain Codex of the Massorah, because it did not harmonise with the majority of the Codices of the Massorah, whilst it agreed with a few, or wherever it contradicted itself, I made careful search till I discovered the truth, according to my humble knowledge."¹⁹

How, in the face of such a plain declaration, that he had used sundry Codices of the Massorah, apart from the Massorah which accompanied the copies of the Bible, an accurate and profound scholar like Geiger could say—"from his words it does not appear ^{18*} Massoreth Ha-Massoreth, p. 94, ed. Ginsburg, Longmans, 1867.

¹⁹ Vide infra, p. 79, &c.

whether he had before him one or more such compilations, nay, on the contrary, it seems as if he claimed for himself this compilation," and then charge Ibn Adonijah with designedly concealing his original sources, is to us a matter of the utmost astonishment. Can it be that Geiger has not read through Ibn Adonijah's Introduction to the Rabbinic Bible, in which he gives this detailed description of his labours?

The imputation appears still more unaccountable when it is compared with the correct account which a few pages before Geiger gives of Ibn Adonijah's most assiduous and conscientious work. "Jacob b. Chajim," he says,¹⁹ "has the great merit of having transmitted to us the Massorah, in the second Bomberg Bible, edited by him (1525), after comparing it most carefully with different MSS. He has furnished us with a work of the utmost discernment and indescribable industry. He has used several MSS. for the Massorah parva and magna, endeavoured to reconcile and solve contradictions and difficulties; and has conscientiously given an account of this, as well as of his scruples. He must certainly have had before him a Massoretic survey, but this he has entirely recast in its arrangement. By his not only referring frequently in the large marginal Massorah to articles in the survey, but, vice versa, being sometimes satisfied with a reference in the latter to the former, he actually also endeavoured to make it a complete survey, inasmuch as he has tried to work up the whole Massoretic material, in so far as it did not relate to entirely isolated details; and moreover, by arranging it alphabetically, he has transformed it into a Massoretic lexicon, so that the finding of the Massoretic definitions is greatly facilitated. That he had MSS. before him for this work is evident from the whole plan, and especially from his frank confession, in separate articles, that the statements are sometimes contrary in themselves, and sometimes contradict other statements, and that he leaves the solution. However, the bringing together of the separate and scattered stones into a well compacted edifice is his work. The arrangement was uncommonly difficult; he had often to hesitate, in the course of his work, in which to put single articles; and this indeed constituted simply a single and subordinate part in the great work of a complete edition of the Bible, with Targum and a number of Commentaries."

¹⁹ Jakob ben Chajim hat das große Verdienst, uns dieselbe in der von ihm besorgten Ausgabe der zweiten rabbinischen Bomberg'schen Bibel (1525), mit sorgfältiger Vergleichung verschiedener Handschriften, überliefert zu haben. Er hat uns ein Werk ci:Thavoller Kenntniß und unfäglichen Fleißes geliefert; er hat für die kleine und die große Maßorah mehrere Handschriften benützt, Differenzen und Schwierigkeiten auszugleichen und zu lösen gesucht, und gewissenhaft giebt er darüber wie über seine Strupel Bericht. Auch die maßorethische Uebersicht lag ihm sicherlich vor; diese aber arbeitete er in Betreff der Anordnung vollständig um. Nicht blos daß er in der großen Randmaßorah häufig auf Artikel der Uebersicht verwies, umgekehrt zuweilen in dieser sich mit einer Verweisung auf die große Randmaßorah begnügte, hat er sie auch wirklich zu einer vollständigen Uebersicht zu gestalten versucht, indem er den ganzen maßorethischen Stoff, soweit er nicht ganz vereinzelt Detail betraf, darin zu verarbeiten suchte' und daß er sie ferner alphabetisch ordnete, sie also zu einem maßorethischen Verikon umgestaltete, das die Auffindung der maßorethischen Bestimmungen sehr erleichterte. Daß ihm Handschriften zu dieser Arbeit vorlagen,

From this description, which is irreconcilable with the other, wherein Ibn Adonijah is charged with designed concealment of the original sources, it is almost certain that Geiger could not have read through Jacob b. Chajim's Introduction to the Bible. For here, where Geiger is really anxious to do him justice, and where he alludes to Ibn Adonijah's materials, he simply refers to his remarks in the Massorah finalis, drawing from them his conclusion, and does not at all refer to Ibn Adonijah's Introduction, where he most explicitly states that he had before him separate Codices of the Massorah. That he does not specify these Codices, is owing to the fact that the several redactions of the survey of the Massorah, and the fragmentary nature of many of the Codices, precluded such a bibliographical description. Besides, paleographical and bibliographical descriptions of MSS., used in editing a work, belong to modern days. The editors of the greatest works, after the invention of printing, and in the days of Ibn Adonijah, never thought of giving an account of the materials they used up. Cardinal Ximenes, and his co-workers at the magnificent edition of the Complutensian Polyglott, gave no account whatsoever of the materials and MSS. they used for the texts of the Old and New ist aus der ganzen Anlaae ersichtlich, besonders daraus, daß er unumwunden zu einzelnen Artikeln bekennt, daß die Angaben bald in sich selbst bald mit andern im Widerspruch stehn, und er die Lösung anheimstellt. Allein die Zusammenschichtung der einzelnen zerstreuten Bausteine zu einem wohlgefügtan Bau ist sein Werk. Die Anordnung war ungemein schwierig, er mußte oft schwanken, an welcher Stelle er den einzelnen Artikel unterbringen sollte, im Laufe der Arbeit selbst — und dieselbe schloß sich ja blos als einzelner untergeordneter Theil an das große Werk einer vollständigen Bibelausgabe mit Targum und einer Anzahl Commentare an — änderte er zuweilen seinen Plan. Jüdische Zeitschrift, vol. iii., p. 105.

Testaments; and Biblical critics have to the present day not succeeded in finding out these materials. Yet who ever thinks of charging the Cardinal, and the editors of the Complutensian Polyglott, with designedly concealing the original sources of their work, in order that it might appear greater than it actually was?

Levita, who, in referring to the extraordinary dimensions of the Massorah magna, tells us that "if all the words of it which he had seen in his life were to be written down, and bound up in a book, it would exceed in bulk the Bible itself," declares that the greater part of Ibn Adonijah's compilation is from the Ochla Ve-Ochla.²⁰ Now Ibn Adonijah does not even mention the name of this Massoretic Compendium; and it would at first sight seem as if we had here one of the original sources, which he had designedly concealed. But the fact that Levita found a copy of this treatise, after great exertions,²¹—though he lived in the very place where Ibn Adonijah sojourned, and was engaged by the very printer who employed Ibn Adonijah, and who collected and possessed all the Codices of the Massorah used in the edition of the Rabbinic Bible, would of itself show that Ibn Adonijah could not have had before him this particular redaction when he compiled the Massorah. Levita's remark, therefore, simply proves that the different redactions of the separate Massorah, or the Ochla Ve-Ochla, which Ibn Adonijah worked up in his great compilation, also embodied the greater portion contained in the particular redaction in question.

Had the Ochla Ve-Ochla referred to by Levita come to light, we should have been able, by comparing it with the present Massorah, to see how much of it Ibn Adonijah incorporated in his compilation, and in what manner he worked up the materials. But, unfortunately, this Codex, like all other Massoretic compilations, has disappeared. There can, however, be no doubt that Levita's statement is exaggerated, and that, from his known enmity to Ibn Adonijah for having embraced Christianity, he would only too readily seize any plausible opportunity of depreciating his fellow-labourer's work. Yet even he was constrained to bestow the greatest praise upon Ibn Adonijah's compilation, and to account for its deficiencies by adducing the ancient proverb that "every beginning is difficult."²²

The few independent surveys of the Massorah, which have of late ²⁰ Massoreth Ha-Massoreth, p. 188, ed. Ginsburg.

²¹ Ibid., p. 98.

²² Ibid., p. 95, &c.

years been discovered in public libraries, only show how vast Ibn Adonijah's labours must have been in producing his compilation. For, not only do these MSS. exhibit the greatest diversity in details, but not a single one of them can be compared, in number of rubrics or in point of arrangement, with the present Massorah finalis. About the relationship of the Great Massorah, which the celebrated R. Gershom b. Jehodab (circa 960–1028), "the luminary of the dispersed," already copied with his own hands,²³ and which is frequently quoted by Rashi, and by the transcribers of the Leipsig Codex (No. 1), with Ibn Adonijah's compilation, we can say nothing, since no Codex of this particular redaction of the Great Massorah has as yet been found. We can, however, speak positively about the recently discovered and published Ochla Ve-Ochla.

The Ochla Ve-Ochla, as has already been remarked, is the name which in the course of time was given by some to one or more redactions of the independent survey of the Massorah, to distinguish it from the other Great Massorah,²⁴ which was written above and below the text of the Bible. By this appellation, this particular redaction of the Great Massorah was first quoted, towards the end of the twelfth century, by David Kimchi,²⁵ and Ibn Aknin.²⁶ It is then quoted again by Isaac b. Jehudah, in the middle of the thirteenth century;²⁷ and then again by Levita in 1538, who describes it as the only separate Massorah.²⁸ Henceforth it entirely disappeared. Even R. Salmon Norzi, the great Biblical critic, and Massoretic authority (circa 1560–1630), who wrote his celebrated critical and Massoretic

²³ Comp. Delitzsch, Catal. Codd. Lips., p. 273; and also Zunz, Additamenta, to Delitzsch's Catalogue, p. 315, where the passages are given in which Rashi quotes the "Great Massorah."

²⁴ Hebrew, מסורה הגדולה; מסורה גדולה; Chaldee, מסורא רבא, מסורא רבא. Vide supra, p. 16, &c.

²⁵ Kimchi quotes the Ochla Ve-Ochla in his grammar, entitled Michlol, 35 b, col. 2; 51a, col 2; ed. Levita, Bomberg, 1545, fol.; or 112 b, 163 a, ed. Hechim. Fürth, 1793; and in his Lexicon, s. v., קרב.

²⁶ For Ibn Aknin's quotations, which are to be found in his ethical work entitled ספר האנוש, and in his Methology, see Steinschneider, in Geiger's Jüdische Zeitschrift, vol. i., p. 316, note 31, Breslau, 1862.

²⁷ The work in which Isaac b. Jehudah quotes the Ochla Ve-Ochla is entitled ספר האשל. Comp. Steinschneider, Catalogus Libr. Hebr., in Bibliotheca Bodleiana, col. 1418; the same author in Geiger's Jüdische Zeitschrift, vol. i., p. 317, note; Graetz, Geschichte der Juden, vol. v., p. 555, note, Magdeburg, 1860; and see also Neubauer, Notice sur la Lexicographie Hébraïque, p. 9. Paris, 1863.

²⁸ Comp. Massoreth Ha-Massoreth, pp. 93, 94, 138.

Commentary on the Hebrew Bible, about half a century later could no longer find it;²⁹ and such distinguished scholars as Lebrecht and Fürst have pronounced it as lost.³⁰ Dr. Derenburg, however, whilst preparing the catalogue of Hebrew MSS. in the Imperial Library, at Paris, had the good fortune to discover an independent "Great Massorah," commencing with the words Ochla Ve-Ochla.³¹ Shortly after, Dr. Frensdorff, who has for years been engaged in Massoretic studies, heard of the discovery (January, 1859), and, with the zeal and disinterested love with which this author prosecutes his Massoretic researches, he went to Paris in 1862, copied the MS., and published it, with learned annotations, in 1864.³²

The questions which we now purpose to examine are—i. What relationship does this Massoretic work sustain to the Massorah, published by Ibn Adonijah? And, ii. Is this Ochla Ve-Ochla the identical work which is quoted by Kimchi, Ibn Aknim, Isaac b. Jehudah, and Elias Levita, or is it simply one of the redactions of the ancient Great Massorah, which, like the several other redactions, obtained the appellation Ochla Ve-Ochla?

i. The first great difference between the Ibn Adonijah compilation and the Ochla Ve-Ochla is that the former contains upwards of six thousand one hundred rubrics, whilst the latter only contains about four hundred. ii. Though Ibn Adonijah's compilation comprises more than fifteen times the number of rubrics that the Ochla Ve-Ochla contains, yet the latter has no less than fifty-three entire rubrics which are not at all to be found in the former. They are as follows, according to the numbers of the Ochla Ve-Ochla:—Nos. li., lx., lxxiii., lxxiii., lxxiv., lxxviii., clxxv., clxxvi., cxxx., clxxx., clxxxi., clxxxii., clxxxiii., clxxxix., ccii., ccvii., ccxvi., ccxx., ccxxiii., ccxxiv., ccxxv., ccxxvi., ccxxix., cccxxii., cccxxiii., cccalii., ccclvii., ccclviii., ccclxiii., cclxv., cclxvii., cclxxxi., cclxxxii.,

²⁹ See the edition of the Hebrew Scriptures, with his Commentary, entitled, A Gift Offering, or Oblation of Salomon ben Jehudah ("מנחת שלום"), 1 Sam. i. 9, vol. ii. p. 27 b. Mantua, 1742-44.

³⁰ Thus Lebrecht, in the Introductory notes to his edition of Kimchi's Lexicon, remarks, "sed postquam tota argumentorum ejus summa in Masoram magnam bibliorum rabbinorum transiit, ipse liber periisse videtur, p. xlix., Berlin, 1847; and Fürst, ספר מלכו ספר מלכו ונראה שגאון מאתו ונראה שגאון מאתו—Appendices to his Concordance, p. 1892.

³¹ Bibliothèque Impériale, Ancien Fonds Hébreu, No. 56.

³² The complete title of the book is Das Buch Ochla W' Ochla (Massora) Herausgegeben übersetzt und mit erläuterenden Anmerkungen versehen nach einer, soweit bekannt, einzigen, in der Kaiserlichen Bibliothek zu Paris befindlichen Handschrift.—Von Dr. S. Frensdorff, Hanover, 1864.

celxxxiii., celxxxiv., celxxxvi., celxxxvii., cexxiv., ccei., ccevi., ccevvii.; ccevviii., cceix., ccecvii., ccexxix., ccexxx., ccexxxi., ccecxlii., ccecxlix., cceclx., cceclxviii., cceclxx., and portions of three rubrics, Nos., xviii., celxvi., and ccexxvii.⁸⁸ iii. Some of the parallel rubrics in the one have occasionally a few instances less than the other, and vice versa. iv. The order in which the instances are enumerated in the respective rubrics is more confused, and less in accordance with the sequence of the books in the Bible in Ibn Adonijah's compilation, than in the Ochla Ve-Ochla. In the Ochla Ve-Ochla the order of the books is as follows: Pentateuch, earlier Prophets as usual, then Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Isaiah, and the Minor Prophets; the Five Megilloth are sometimes placed before the Psalms, and sometimes before Chronicles; sometimes, however, they follow irregularly immediately after the Hagiographa.

With these important differences between the two redactions of the Massorah, we turn to the second question, viz., whether the Ochla Ve-Ochla now published by Dr. Frensdorff is the identical redaction referred to by the different lexicographers and expositors, and declared by Levita to have been used by Ibn Adonijah for his compilation. Dr. Frensdorff, the learned editor of the Ochla Ve-Ochla, maintains that it is the identical Massoretic work which had been lost for nearly three centuries. Levita, who, as far as can be ascertained, was the last that possessed a copy of the Ochla Ve-Ochla, and who had studied it most carefully, distinctly maintains that the greatest part of Ibn Adonijah's compilation, i. e., of the present Massorah finalis, is taken ⁸⁸ Frensdorff also marks Nos. cexxxix. and celix., as wanting in Ibn Adonijah's compilation. But this is a mistake, as Geiger has already pointed out, since rubric cexxxix., which gives three groups of words, respectively occurring three times in the same section, the first time with Vav conjunctive, and the second and third times without it, is also to be found in the Massorah finalis. p. 28 b, cols. 1 and 2, ed. Buxtorf or Frankfurter. Only that the Codex from which this rubric of the printed Massorah was taken, had erroneously four such groups, and that this error has been transferred into the Massorah finalis. For וְאֵלֶּיךָ דָּרִי which is quoted as occurring twice, once beginning with וְהִנֵּנִי (read וְהִנֵּנִי), and once beginning with אֵלֶּיךָ דָּרִי, occurs only once, and the two references are to one and the same verse, Isaiah xlvi. 8. The other rubric, No. celix., which gives nine instances of two combined words, the first of which occurs once only with the prefix Mem, is to be found complete in the Massorah finalis, under the letter Mem, p. 48 b, col. 4, ed. Buxtorf or Frankfurter, where, however, כְּחֵץ הַכֶּסֶּח, the reference to Jeremiah xxxix. 14, is erroneously put for מִן־הַכֶּסֶּח, as the Paris redaction rightly has it. It is to be added, that in enumerating the rubrics in the Paris redaction, which are wanted in the printed Massorah, Geiger has omitted Nos. li., lx., cxxx., cexix., and celxv., marked by Frensdorff in his notes on the respective articles.

from it.⁸⁴ Now the most cursory comparison of the two works will show, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that Ibn Adonijah could not have had before him the redaction of the Ochla Ve-Ochla, published by Dr. Frensdorff; and that either this Ochla Ve-Ochla is not the one which Levita made the principal basis of his Massoretic studies, and which is quoted by Kimchi, Ibn Aknim, &c., or that Levita's statement is not true.

Indeed, Dr. Frensdorff himself admits that the Ochla Ve-Ochla, which has recently been found in the Imperial Library at Paris, and which he has published, could not possibly have been used by Jacob Ibn Adonijah. We cannot do better than give Dr. Frensdorff's own proofs for this statement: i. The Ochla Ve-Ochla has fifty-six articles which are wanting in Ibn Adonijah's compilation, and which he surely would not have omitted if he had had this redaction before him; and ii. Some of the articles, which are to be found in the two Massorahs alike, are very defective in the printed Massorah finalis, thus showing that Ibn Adonijah did not copy the articles into his compilation from this redaction of the Ochla Ve-Ochla, or the articles in the copy would have been as complete as those in the original.

Thus under the alphabetical list of words which begin with Vav and Mem, and occur only once, Ibn Adonijah remarks, "the above registers, which begin with ו in alphabetical order, from ומא to ומל, have all been collected from several Massoretic treatises, piece by piece. There is, however, a large alphabetical list of them complete, from ומא to ומל; but he has not been able to procure it complete, except from ומל to ומת. The rest he has had to search out register by register, and he does not know whether it is complete or defective."⁸⁵ If Ibn Adonijah had before him the Ochla Ve-Ochla, published by Dr. Frensdorff, he would have found this complete list in No. xviii. Moreover, from this list, which occurs in the list in the Ochla Ve-Ochla, he would have been able to fill up many a gap which occurs in the list of the Massorah finalis, from ומל to ומת.

Constrained to admit that Ibn Adonijah could not have had this redaction of the Ochla Ve-Ochla before him when compiling the ⁸⁴ גם כל המסורה הנדפסת מה ויני' סידה בעשרים וארבע הגדול רובו אינו אלא מספר ההוא Massoreth Ha-Massoreth, p. 138, ed. Ginsburg.

⁸⁵ אמר המעתיק כל אלו השמור דמשמשינ ומא' ב' מא' ועד ל' כולחון לקשור מספרי המסור' ועיר' שם ועיר' שם אבל היא כולה א"ב גדולה אחת דמשמשת ומא' עד ת"י לא הגיע לידה ממנה בידו כי אם מל' ועד ת"י וישאר לקשור' שמה שמה ולא ידענא אם חסר או לא עכ"ל. Comp. Massorah finalis, p. 44 a, col. 3.

Massorah, and yet anxious to maintain that it is the identical Ochla Ve-Ochla which is quoted by Kimchi, Ibn Aknin, and others, which Levita made the basis of his Massoretic labours, and which he positively declares yielded to Jacob b. Chajim the greatest part of his compilation, Dr. Frensdorff simply disputes Levita's statement. But so plain a declaration by a contemporary scholar, and the first Massoretic authority of his time, is not to be set aside. Indeed, Dr. Frensdorff would never have resorted to so desperate and hazardous a measure, had he not started from the false hypothesis, that there was only one redaction of the Ochla Ve-Ochla, and that his was the unique copy which has survived the ravages of time. The incorrectness of this assumption, however, is now proved beyond the shadow of a doubt, by the discovery of another and much larger redaction of the Ochla Ve-Ochla than that published by Dr. Frensdorff. The MS. is in the Library of the University of Halle (Y. b 10), and a description of it, by the late Professor Hupfeld, has just appeared in the Journal of the German Oriental Society.⁸⁶ This description we recast and condense, so as to adapt it for our purpose, in order to show its relationship both to Ibn Adonijah's compilation, or the Massorah finalis, and to the Ochla Ve-Ochla, edited by Dr. Frensdorff.

The Halle MS., which is a small quarto on parchment, beautifully written in square Hebrew characters of the middle ages, consists of 188 numbered leaves, or 276 pages, and contains upwards of 1,000 Massoretic rubrics, in two parts, as follows :—

THE FIRST PART wants six leaves of apparently a grammatical import. On p. 7 a stands, after the superscription סִימָן מַלְבִּי יִשְׂרָאֵל, a table of the accents, with their respective figures and names; and on p. 7 b–11, an Index (7 b–11), of the Rubrics contained in both parts. The Massorah proper of the first part, which contains one hundred and seventy rubrics, begins on p. 12 and extends to p. 72, thus embracing sixty-one leaves, or one hundred and twenty-two pages. The rubrics of this part, which contain almost exclusively the essence and older portion of the Massorah, viz., lists of words, forms, and constructions of a unique nature or rare occurrence, are divisible into three groups. The first group consists of seventy, nearly all alphabetical lists (1–70) of words, forms of words, and combinations, which occur once only, or a few times, partly alone, and partly with certain prefixes, with this or that vowel or accent. The second group consists of eighty lists (71–150), giving the various readings, and thus being to a certain extent of a critical nature. Of these, the first two lists only are still alphabetical, the others are incomplete alphabets. The third group consists of twenty lists (151–170), of a similar import to those in the first group. Besides the rubrics, there are a great number of marginal additions throughout this part. They are written both in small square and in Rabbinic characters. Some of these simply continue the statements in the text, or supplement the examples adduced; but most of them contain new lists, so that the total number of lists in the first part amounts to upwards of 260.

⁸⁶ Comp. Zeitschrift der deutschen morgenländischen Gesellschaft, vol. xxi., pp. 201–220. Leipzig, 1867.

THE SECOND PART extends over fol. 73–128, as well as over an unnumbered folio, thus making together fifty-seven leaves, or one hundred and fourteen pages, and contains three hundred and forty-three rubrics, which are again divisible into groups. The first group consists of eighty-eight lists (1–88), of forms of peculiar verbs and nouns, just as a concordance. The second group consists of twenty-one registers (89–109), of textual phenomena, similar to those enumerated in the first part. The third group consists of forty-five rubrics (110–155), of words, which are unique in one book only, which are peculiar in their orthography, vowel points, or terminations. The fourth group consists of a hundred and eighty-eight registers (156–344), giving forms and textual peculiarities of all sorts. Besides these numbered ones, there are two lists, one between Nos. 113 and 114, and the other at the end, which are not numbered, so that the total sum of rubrics in this part is three hundred and forty-five. To this must be added a large unnumbered piece, extending over six pages, designated כללות, and giving one hundred and thirty short rubrics, between Nos. 279 and 280. There are, moreover, in this part, a much larger number of marginal additions than in the first part. They are to be found on almost every page, and the additional rubrics amount to upwards of a hundred and eighty; so that the total number of rubrics in the second part amounts to upwards of five hundred and twenty.

Immediately after the second part, p. 129 a, are registers of the numbers of verses in the Old Testament, the chronology of Biblical events, and the respective authors of the sacred books. Whereupon follow, pp. 129 b–132 b, sundry Massoretic remarks, which, though under the inscription זו ממסרה הקטנה, this is from the Massorah parva, consist mostly of lists of peculiar forms, orthography, and phrases strictly connected with the Massorah magna. These lists, some of which already occur in the marginal notes, make together about two hundred and fourteen. Then follow, on two unnumbered half leaves, thirty-four rubrics, written in Rabbinic characters, of forms and phrases with peculiar points and orthography, and of verses containing certain words. And, finally, there are other pages (pp. 185 a–186 a) of lists, written in Rabbinic characters, giving the passages throughout the entire Old Testament where Pattach (Segol) is to be found with Athnach and Soph Pasuk. The Appendix, therefore, contains $(214 + 84 =)$ 248 additional rubrics, thus making the sum total upwards of a thousand rubrics.

It now remains that we should point out the relationship of this redaction of the Ochla Ve-Ochla, or the great Massorah, both to Ibn Adonijah's compilation, and to the redaction published by Dr. Frensdorff.

i. The Halle MS., though rich in its Massoretic lore, has incomparably fewer rubrics than Ibn Adonijah's compilation.

ii. In several instances where the arrangement and superscription of the rubrics in Ibn Adonijah's compilation differs to advantage from the Paris redaction, edited by Dr. Frensdorff, the Halle MS. agrees with the printed Massorah. Thus the Massorah marginalis, on Levit. i. 1, in giving the alphabetical lists of words which occur once only with Kametz, instead of Pattach, adds the important designation, זקפה with Zakeph. The Halle redaction, where this rubric is No. 22, has the same addition, whereas in the Paris redaction, where it is No. 21, this definition is omitted. Again, the rubric of the verses giving the names of the Canaanitish nations, has the inscription in the Massorah finalis, "two groups of three verses each in which the six names, viz., the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites, follow in the same order; in fourteen verses they have a unique order, making together twenty verses,"⁸⁷ distinguishing two features, first the order of the Canaanitish nations, and second the absence of the Vav. In accordance with this the two groups are first enumerated, whereupon follow the instances, in each one of which the order is peculiar,⁸⁸ mostly in pairs. After this follow two other rubrics, with separate inscriptions, giving the variations of Vav, &c. The Halle redaction has the same arrangement,

⁸⁷ חד מן ב' וזין כן ב' אית בהון מן ר' מלין הכנעני חחתי חמורי חשרי חחתי חדבוי יד פסוקים דמיחורין כלהון כ' פסוקים. Compare that portion of it entitled Various Readings (חלוסי קריאה), p. 62 b, ed. Frankfurter, or ed. Buxtorf.

⁸⁸ There are properly only twelve instances, Exod. xiii. 5, and Josh. xxiv. 11, being omitted.

with the same examples, only without the inscription of the last rubric; whilst the Paris redaction, edited by Dr. Frensdorff (rubric 274) mixes up both the order of the Canaanitish names and the absence of the Vav in one rubric, with the inscription, "twenty verses in which the sequence of the words is irregular; fourteen of them have each a peculiar order, and also those which have Vav, and those which have not Vav."³⁹

iii. In many instances where Ibn Adonijah's compilation is defective and incorrect, and the Paris redaction is correct, the Halle redaction has the same blunders as the printed Massorah. Thus in the alphabetical list of words which occur once only with the preposition Al, and once with the preposition El, the Massorah finalis gives three incorrect instances, viz., עַל הַמְּזִיזָה, אֶל מִלְאכָת, and אֶל קוֹלֶךְ, which do not occur, and which are rightly wanting in the Paris redaction;⁴⁰ whilst the Halle redaction has the same errors. In the alphabetical list of words occurring twice, once with the article He, and once without it, the Massorah finalis erroneously gives הַכֶּבֶשׂ הָאֶחָד, inasmuch as it not only occurs in the passage adduced (Exod. xxix. 29), but also in Levit. xiv. 12. This error, which does not occur in the Paris redaction,⁴¹ is also to be found in the Halle MS. The printed Massorah, in the incomplete alphabetical list of words which respectively occur, once with Daleth, and once with Resh, erroneously places וַיִּפְרֹ under the letter Pe, instead of Vav, which is also the case in the Halle redaction; whilst in the Paris redaction it is in its right place.⁴² The alphabetical list of words beginning with Wa, and occurring only once, to which reference has already been made,⁴³ is exactly as imperfect in the Halle redaction as it is in the Massorah finalis. The other instances, adduced by Hupfeld, which exhibit the agreement in the imperfections between the printed Massorah and the Halle MS., we must omit for want of space.

As to the relation of the Halle MS. to the Paris redaction, the ³⁹ כ. פסוקים ומשתבשין בהון י"ד מההון מיהדין וסומן אלין דנסבין ו'ו' ואלין בלא נסבין ו'ו' Compare rubric 274, p. 53, &c.; 149, ed. Frensdorff, Hanover, 1864.

⁴⁰ Compare Massorah finalis, letter Aleph, p. 7 b, with the Paris redaction, rubric 2, p. 3, &c., notes.

⁴¹ Compare Massorah finalis, under letter He, p. 21 a, col. 3, with the Paris redaction, rubric 3, p. 4, notes.

⁴² Compare Massorah finalis, under letter Daleth, p. 19 b, col. 1, with Paris redaction, rubric 7, p. 6.

⁴³ Vide supra, p. 27.

following striking points must be adduced. Apart from the fact that the Halle redaction has nearly treble the number of rubrics, the one having upwards of a thousand, the other scarcely four hundred, a comparison of the materials which these two Massorahs contain in common will show that they both proceeded from the same ancient source, and have been so elaborated, curtailed, expanded, and adapted, as to meet the special requirements of the respective redactors. Before, however, we proceed to point out this connection, it is necessary to remark that the essential portion of the Massorah, which treats on the forms of the words, and gives the number of times these forms occur, is divisible into two parts. The one specifies only the exceptional or rare forms, which occur once, twice, thrice, or at most four times, grouping these together according to analogies, or parallels, or alphabetical lists, or in certain numbers. The other part gives the number of times certain words occur, and assumes the form of a concordance. The Paris redaction is devoted more especially to the first part, whilst the Halle redaction embraces both parts. It is by comparing that part of the Halle redaction which rubricates the anomalies catalogued in the Paris redaction, that we can see the affinity of the two.

Now on comparing the first part of the Halle MS. with the Paris Massorah, it will at once be evident that both the redactors had the same materials before them. The first list in both begins with the significant words Ochla Ve-Ochla. The first great group of alphabetical lists and pairs of forms which occur once or twice only, contained in the first part of the Halle redaction (Nos. 1-70), is to be found in the Paris Massorah entirely, and in the same order, with the exception that No. 13 of the former stands as No. 70 in the latter. The same is the case with the second group of the Halle MS. (Nos. 71-150). These are almost entirely to be found in the Paris redaction, only that rubrics 71 and 72 in the Halle, are rubrics 80 and 81 in the Paris Massorah; and that the latter contains alphabetical, and a few other lists from 82 to 90, so that the parallel sequence is resumed with rubric 91; rubrics 73-150 of the Halle MS. having their correspondence in rubrics 91-166 of the Paris redaction. In this group, however, the Halle MS. has ten rubrics in the orthography of certain words,⁴⁴ which are wanting in the Paris Massorah, whilst the latter has about thirteen rubrics (161, 167-170, 176-181, 214, 216-218), which are wanted in the former. Rubric 180, however, of the Paris redaction, is to be found in the marginal additions of the Halle redaction, and rubric 214 stands as rubric 168, second part of the Halle MS. Greater differences between the two redactions occur in the third group of the Halle MS. (151-170), though the bulk of this group is also to be found in the Paris redaction. Thus Nos. 155-161 are in the latter 76-78, 85-89, 948, 950-953. The corresponding portion in the Paris Massorah, however, is much richer, having lists of logical deductions (182-184); textual phenomena (192-194, 268, 278-295); registers of expressions repeated in the same verses (296-365); and of unique forms and combinations (254-267, 366-373), which are not found in the Halle MS. The latter again has two lists of anomalies in the Divine names and their various combinations (152-154); five catalogues of \aleph and \aleph (162-167), and other things which do not exist in the former.

⁴⁴ These rubrics are on the orthography of והוא לכה, לכה, לכה, לכה, לכה, לכה, לכה, לכה, לכה, לכה, as well as on עק, עק, עק, עק, עק, עק, עק, עק, עק, עק. To this may also be added the contrast (הולין), to rule 151,

The real difference, however, is to be seen in the second part. Here the Halle MS. is much richer than the Paris redaction. Thus, for instance, the latter wants the whole of the second group (Nos. 89-108), and has only three rubrics of the one hundred and eighty-eight which constitute the fourth group (156-344) in the Halle MS., viz., those which are in the Halle MS. Nos. 163, 277, 327. These are in the Paris redaction Nos. 214, 369, 191. Moreover the one hundred and thirty short rules which stand after No. 279 in the Halle MS., are also wanting in the Paris redaction. Of all the rules which are to be found in the marginal glosses and in the Appendices, with the exception of the marginal notes on the first group of the second part (Nos. 1-88), only about fifteen occur in the Paris redaction. Altogether the Paris redaction has about fifty rubrics which are not to be found in the Halle MS., as well as about fifty lists of words which occur in the same verse. Moreover, of the twenty-four rubrics in the Appendix to the Paris Massorah, the Halle MS. has only two rubrics, viz., 23 and 24. The Halle MS., on the other hand, has at least five hundred rubrics which are not to be found in the Paris redaction.

As to the age of the Paris redaction, this cannot be ascertained even approximately. All that is known for certain is that several hands which properly begins the third group, giving a list of 154 instances wherein \aleph occurs in contrast to \aleph , and which, too, is wanted in the Paris redaction.

F

worked at it, and that it could not have been compiled earlier than the twelfth century. This has been shown by Geiger, who refers to No. 216. Here three words are rubricated, which in an exceptional manner have Chirek followed by Jod before Dagesh, viz., לְמִשְׁפָּחָה (Isa. xlii. 24), בִּיקְרוֹתֶיךָ (Psalm xlv. 10), and לִיקָהָת (Prov. xxx. 17). Now Geiger shows that these readings were not fixed till the tenth century, and that R. Saadia Gaon (892–942), was the first who rubricated them, since Rashi (1040–1105), in his commentary on Psalm xlv. 10, mentions to have seen them in R. Saadia's Nikkud (נקוד רב סעריה). From this, it is evident that this rubric was not in the Massorah in the twelfth century, and that it was inserted afterwards, since this celebrated expositor, who so frequently quotes the Massorah in his explanations of anomalous readings, would surely in this instance not have referred to R. Saadia's Nikkud, had the rubric in question then formed part of the Massorah. As the compilers of the Paris redaction made their compilation from Massorahs which already contained this rubric, it must at least have been effected circa 1200.

The age of the Halle MS. is not fixed by Hupfeld, and not having as yet had an opportunity of inspecting it, I cannot ascertain it. The fact, however, that both it and the Massorah finalis contain many incomplete lists, and that the order in which the anomalies are enumerated is not according to the sequence of the books, shows that the materials from which they were elaborated were not only the same as but much older than the Paris redaction, and that the latter was made at the time when these Massoretic materials had already been shaped into proper order and form. It is therefore of the utmost importance that the Halle MS. should be published, for it is only by a careful comparison of the three Massorahs, viz., the Paris redaction, the Halle MS., and the Massorah finalis, that the readings of the Hebrew verity can properly be fixed.

Now that two independent Massorahs have been discovered, we are in a better position to judge of the labour which Ibn Adonijah bestowed upon his compilation. Not only have the Paris and Halle redactions incomparably less rubrics than the printed Massorah, but they have neither any fixed plan nor definite order in the disposition and arrangement of the various rubrics. With the exception of sometimes placing together a few lists of similar subjects, they have an arbitrary sequence of the different articles. Jacob b. Chajim Ibn Adonijah, therefore, has not only the merit of having amassed a larger quantity of Massoretic materials than is to be found in the independent Massorahs now discovered, but he was the first who distributed the Massoretic remarks under the proper places to which they belonged, and who arranged the whole mass of the multifarious rubrics constituting this critico-exegetical apparatus into an alphabetical and lexical order, so that any anomaly or Massoretic remark may now easily be found by the student of the Hebrew text.

That Ibn Adonijah's compilation, which involved so much research and labour, and which after all constitutes one portion only of his gigantic Rabbinic Bible, should contain many imperfections, is no matter of surprise to any one who understands the nature of the work. Indeed it could not be otherwise, when the state of the materials which he had to work up is considered. But though Elias Levita, his contemporary and co-worker in the same department, had already alluded to these imperfections, and rightly accounted for them by quoting the old adage that "every beginning is difficult,"⁴⁵ yet he, as well as Morinus,⁴⁶ Michaelis,⁴⁷ and others who repeated his strictures, found it a far more easy task categorically to refer to errors and omissions than to collect and correct them. Buxtorf, who alone had the courage to embark upon correcting Jacob b. Chajim Ibn Adonijah, has more generally mistaken the meaning of the Massorah than rectified the errors. Now that the Paris redaction has been published, and that another and more important independent MS. has been discovered, which yield ample materials for amending and completing this ancient critical apparatus, it will be a burning shame if those who love the Bible, and are anxious for a correct text of the Old Testament verity, do not come forward to aid in the publication of the newly discovered MS., and help us in procuring an edition of the Massorah in as complete and accessible a form as the present rich materials enable us to obtain.

⁴⁵ Vide Supra, p. 23.

⁴⁶ Excercitatt. Biblicæ, pp. 384, &c., 556, &c.

⁴⁷ Preface to the edition of the Hebrew Bible, cap. IV., section v., p. 21, &c., Halle, 1720.

INTRODUCTION.

הקדמה

Thus saith the humble Jacob ben Chajim ben Isaac Ibn Adonijah: "He entereth in peace, where the righteous rest upon their couches, who walked in uprightness."¹

Praised be the Creator, who exists and yet none can see him, who is hidden and yet found by every one that seeks him, who graciously bestowed language on mankind in order that they might communicate precious things joined together by wisdom, so as to become one, to gather his rain and flame, and learn his words and ways. He endowed his people, his first-born son, with the holy tongue, which is the language of the Law and the Prophets, and is very wonderfully adapted to open the eyes of the blind, and impart light unto them, so that all the nations of the world may know that there is nothing like this holy language in purity of style and charm of diction; it is like a tree of life to those who possess it, and its wisdom imparts life to the owner

אמר הצדיק יעקב בן חיים בן יצחק ו' אדוניו ישי"ע מ"ה.¹ ישתבח הכבוד הנמצא ועין לא השגתו, הנעלם וכל דרשו ימצאנו, אשר חנן למין האנושי לשון למודים, למלאה ענינים חמודים, ביד השכל צמודים, וחיו לאחדים, ללקוח רביביו ושביביו, וללמוד ניביו ונרביביו, וזרה לעמו, בנו בכורו, לשון חקדש אשר היא לשון חתורה וחנכואה, היורדת פלאות, לפקוח עינים עורות, והיו למאורות, למען רעה כל עמי הארץ, כי לשון חקדש אין ערוך אליה, בצחות מליה, ונועם משליה, והיא כעץ חיים ררופה לבקליה, והחכמה תחיה בעליה, והאלהים

¹ This introductory formula is only to be found in the editio princeps of the Rabbinic Bible, edited by Ibn Adonijah himself (1524-25). All the subsequent editions, which were published long after his embracing Christianity and his death, have omitted it, and substituted for it the words אמר המעתיק, thus saith the author, thus removing from the very beginning of the Introduction to the Bible the name of the author, who had left the Jewish community. This fully confirms our opinion that his name was also removed from other works which he prepared for the press and annotated, and that his sudden disappearance from the field of literary labour is to be ascribed to the fact of his having renounced Judaism (vide supra, p. 13). As to the abbreviation ע"ד, it is the acrostic of the second verse in Isaiah lvii., אשר על משכבותיהם הלך נכדו, which the Jews use as a euphemic expression when speaking of the dead, in consequence of the traditional explanation given to this passage. Thus the Talmud not only explains it as referring to a beatified future life, but says that, when a pious man dies, an angel announces his arrival in heaven. Whereupon the Lord says that the righteous are to go to meet and welcome him with the salutation, "He cometh in peace, to where they rest upon their couches, who walked in uprightness." (Isa. lvii. 2.) Indeed we are told that this verse is used by three companies of angels, who go to meet the saint. The first angelic group salute him with the words, "He cometh in peace!" the second with "Who walked in uprightness!" and the third with "May he rest upon his couch!" (Compare Kethuboth, 104 a.)

thereof. Now God gave it to his people whom he had chosen for himself—gave it to them only to be concealed under the shadow of His hand; for they alone know its mysteries, its grammar, its rules, and its anomalies. And the men of the Great Synagogue,² in whom was heavenly light, bright and powerful, like pure gold, on whose heart every statute of the Law was engraved, have set up marks, and built a wall around it, and made ditches between the walls, and bars, and gates, to preserve the citadel in its splendour and brightness; and they all came to the transparent cloud of its burning doctrine and rising incense; and they sanctified themselves to take the fire from off its altar, so that no other hand might touch it and desecrate it so as to become a bat for every fool; they strung together its golden words from columns of the Word of God—words of purity; and the Spirit alighted upon them, and as if by prophecy they wrote down their labours in books, to which nothing is to be added. The princes of the people gathered together to hear their sublime words; and when they had finished their work, the supernatural vision and its source were sealed, and the glory and splendour departed, and the angel of the Lord appeared no more. For no one rose after them who could do as they did. And now we are here this day gathering the gleanings which they have left; and we capture the faint ones of their rear-guard, and run in their path day and night, and toil, but can never come up to them.

² The Great Synagogue or Synod (בביתא דגדולה) Synagoga magna) to which Jacob b. Chajim refers, was instituted by Nehemiah (comp. Neh. x. 1–10; Midrash Ruth, cap. iii. fol. 45 b; Jerusalem Shebiith, v. 1, 35 b), and continued till the death of Simon the Just (B. C. 300), who was the last member of it. It consisted of one hundred and twenty members, comprising the representatives of the following five classes of the Jewish nation:—i. The chiefs of the Priestly divisions (ראשי בית אב); ii. The chiefs of the Levitical Families (ראשי הלוויים); iii. The Heads of the Israelite Families (ראשי דעים); iv. Deputies from the different towns; and, v. The distinguished men of all ranks (בביתים). They were all divided into ELDERS (זקנים, πρεσβύτεροι) and SCRIBES (סופרים, γραμματεῖς); and among the many important enactments and institutions which are ascribed to them are—i. The compilation of the Hebrew canon and the various readings; ii. The composition of the Book of Esther; iii. The introduction of fixed formulæ of prayer; and iv. The foundation of colleges. Comp. Kitto's Cyclopædia, s. v. SYNAGOGUE, THE GREAT.

Thus says the writer: I was dwelling quietly in my house, and flourishing in my abode, prosecuting diligently my studies, at Tunis, which is on the borders of ancient Carthage, when fate removed me to the West, but did not withdraw its hand from afflicting me, and afterwards brought me to the famous city of Venice. And even here I had nothing to do, for the hand of fate was still lifted up, and exalted over me; and its troubles and cares found me in the city, smote me, wounded me, and crushed me. And after about three months of sufferings, I left for a little while the furnace of my afflictions, for I was in a thirsty land. I said in the thoughts of my heart, I will arise now, and walk about the streets of the city. As I was walking in the streets, wandering quietly, behold God sent a highly distinguished and pious Christian, of the name of Daniel Bomberg, to meet me. May his Rock and Redeemer protect him! This was effected through the exertions of an Israelite, who bestowed great kindness upon me, and whose name is R. Chajim Alton, son of the distinguished Moses Alton. May his Rock and Redeemer protect him! He brought me to his printing-office, and shewed me through his establishment, saying to me, Turn in, abide with me,⁸ for here thou shalt find rest for thy soul, and balm for thy wound, as I want thee to revise the books which I print, correct the mistakes, purify the style, and examine the works, till they are as refined silver and as purified gold.

Although I saw that his desire was greater than my ability, yet I thought that we must not refuse a superior. Still I told him that I did not know as much, nor nearly as much [as he supposed], in accordance with that we find at the end of chap. ii. of Jerusalem Maccoth: "A man who knows only one book, when he is in a place where he is respected for knowing two books, is in duty bound to say I only know one book."⁴ And as I have no great intellect, how could I, being so low and insignificant, undertake such great things, from which, peradventure, mischief might ensue, seeing that R. Ishmael had already exhorted a Scribe in his days (Sota, 20 a, and in other places), "My son, take great care how thou doest thy work, for thy work is the work of heaven, lest thou drop or add a letter, and thereby wilt be a destroyer of the whole world,"⁵ which is still more applicable to the present time, when the distinction between the oral and written law has ceased, as both are now written down, and a mistake may describe the right wrong, and the wrong right. Therefore, I felt that I must not rely upon my own judgment, but examine two or three codices, and follow them wherever they agree; and if they do not agree, must choose from among the readings those which appear to me unobjectionable, and sift them till I am convinced that they are correct and clear, especially as Ramban⁶ and Rashbam⁷ have already counselled, in their Theological Decisions, not to make emendations upon mere conjectures.

שבליהם, ומונבים נחשליהם, ויום ולילה נרוץ במעגליהם, ונינע ולא נינע אליהם: אמר חמניד, שלו הייתי בבית, ורענן בדיכלי, שוקר על למורי במוניס חמרינה, אשר קרוב לקצה נבול קרמינא הקדומה, וסלמלי חומן בארצות המערב, לא חשיב ידו מבלע ושב ורפא לו, ורחני פה ויניציא הבירה, היא העיר הנדולה, וגם פה לא עשיתי מאומה, כי יד חומן נשנבה ורמה, וסדרותיו וסבותיו בעיר מצאנו, חכוני פצעוני הממוני, ויחיו כמשלש חדשים למכות, יאחזי מעם מכור החלואה, ואני בארץ חלאובות, אמרתי ברעיוני חלבבור, אקומה נא ואסובבה בעיר בשוקים וברחובות, כצאחתי את העיר משתאה מחישי, והנה לקראתי כי הקרא יהיה לפני איש אחר מחסדי חנוצרים איש החם והמעלה שמו מסי דניאל בומברג, ישמרהו צורו וגאלו, חבשהחללות איש עברי, אשר הרבה מובותיו עמי, שמו רבי חיים אלמון, בן הנעלה רבי משה אלמון, ישמרהו צורו וגאלו, ויביאני אל בית דפוסו, ויראני כל בית נכותו, ויאמר סודה שבה עמדי כי פה המצא מרנוע לנפשך, וצרי למכתך, כי חפצתי שתהיה ספרי הנדפסים, להסיר מהם מוקשי הענות, ותוככם ותצרפם בכור העיוניות, ותשקלם כמאנוי הישריות, ער יצאו מלובנים ומצורפים כצדק כסף, ומבותרים כבחון הזהב: ואף על פי שראיתי כספו גדולה מחשנתי, אמרתי בלבי אין מסרבין לגדול, ואפילו חכי

⁸ The expression עמדי, with me, is not the editio princeps, but there can be no doubt that it has dropped out by mistake. The subsequent editions have, therefore, rightly inserted it.

⁴ The quotation from the Talmud is not literal. It is as follows: בר נש דחכם חדא מיכלה ואילו לאח ואינן מיקרין ליה כד הוא חכם חרין מיכלה צריך לומר לון חדא מיכלה אנא חכים (Comp. Jerusalem Maccoth, ii. 7, p. 32 a, ed. Grätz. Krotochin, 1866). It must be added, that the editio princeps rightly reads דחכים, at the end of the quotation, and that the future editions have wrongly substituted for it מכיר.

⁵ Neither is this quotation literal. It is as follows in the Talmud: לאחך מלאכת שמים היא שמא תחסי אית אחת או תחיר אית אחת נמצאת איה מחריב אה כל העולם כולו

⁶ Ramban (רמב"ן), is a contraction of the initials of נחמן בן נחמן, R. Moses b. Nachman = Nachmanides. This distinguished Commentator, Talmudist, and Kabbalist was born at Gerona, in Catalonia, about 1195, whence he is also called by Christian writers Moses Gerundensis. He died at Ano (Ptolemais), about 1270. For his life and writings, see Kitto's Cyclopædia, s. v. NACHMANIDES.

⁷ Rashbam רבי שמואל בן מאיר is a contraction of the initials of רשב"ם

אמינא ליה דאנא לא ידענא כולי האי, ולא קרוב מחאי, כדגרסינן בירושלמי סוף פרק אלו הגולין, בר נש דתני חדא מיכלה וחוא אול לאחך דאינן מוקרין ליה בנין דתני, צריך למימר לחו חדא מיכלה אנא חכים, כלומר בחדא מסכתא אני חכם, ולפי דרעתי קלישא דמה אנא העשום השפל לחכמם בנדולות כאלה, דחם ושלום נפיק מניהו דבא כהא דרבי ישמעאל בפרק היה נוטל ובדוכרי אחירי, בני הזהר במלאכתך שמלאכתך מלאכת שמים, שמא תחסי או תחירי אית נמצאת מחריב העולם כלו, וכל שכן בזמן הזה, דאין לחלק בין תורה שבכתב לתורה שבעל פה, שמא חושמה בספר אין בין זה לזה, שמוחבא לאסור המותר ולהחיד האסור, לפום כן לא סמיכנא על דעתי, עד דחינא בספרי דוקין בתרין וזלחא, אי הוו מכווני מושב, ואי לא בירידא מנחון מה דחוי לן דלא קשה מיר, ומחקינן ליה עד דאחבריר לן דנהיר וצחיר, וכבר הזהירו וחרביצו אלה דמב"ק וחרשב"א' בחידושיהם לבלתי הניה מסבא :

ויהי כי ארכו לי שם הימים, לעשות מלאכתי מלאכת שמים, העיר השם יתברך, רוח השר אשר עשיתי עמו, ואמץ לבבו, להדפיס עשרים וארבע, ויאמר לי אהור נא כנבר הליצך, כי חפצי להדפיס עשרים וארבע, באופן זה שחיה עם פירושים ודרגים ומסרה גדולה וקמנה⁸ וקריין וכתבן וכתבן ולא קריין⁹ ומלאי מוחסרים וכולהו דקרוקי ספרי, ובתי הכי המסרה הגדולה כדרך הערוך¹⁰ ויהי כי ארכו לי שם הימים, לעשות מלאכתי מלאכת שמים, העיר השם יתברך, רוח השר אשר עשיתי עמו, ואמץ לבבו, להדפיס עשרים וארבע, ויאמר לי אהור נא כנבר הליצך, כי חפצי להדפיס עשרים וארבע, באופן זה שחיה עם פירושים ודרגים ומסרה גדולה וקמנה⁸ וקריין וכתבן וכתבן ולא קריין⁹ ומלאי מוחסרים וכולהו דקרוקי ספרי, ובתי הכי המסרה הגדולה כדרך הערוך¹⁰

ben Meier, grandson of Rashi, and a very excellent commentator of the Bible. He was born about A.D. 1085, and died about 1155. Comp. Kitto's Cyclopaedia, s. v. RASHEBAM.

⁸ Both the Massorah magna (מסורה הגדולה) and the Massorah parva (מסורה הקטנה) contain the traditional and authoritative glosses on the external form of the Hebrew text. The former, which is generally given in the margin above and below the text, as well as at the end of the Rabbinic Bibles, is more extensive, and quotes in full the passages which come under the same rubric; whilst the latter, which is written in the margin at the side of the text, or in the margin between the columns containing the Hebrew text and the Chaldee paraphrase, simply indicates the number of the passages which come under the same rubric, or hints at other glosses in an abbreviated form, without giving the reference. It was for want of space in the margin of the Hebrew text that the Massorah magna had to be divided into two parts. The divisions thus obtained are respectively denominated—i. מסורה גליינית, MASSORAH MARGINALIS, because this portion of it is given above and below the text; and, ii. מסורה סופית or מסורה מעריכת, MASSORAH FINALIS, because this portion is given at the end of the Rabbinic Bibles.

⁹ The various readings exhibited in the KERI (i. e., as read in the margin), and the KETHIV (i. e., as written in the text), are divisible into three general classes—i. The class denominated KERI AND KETHIV and KETHIV AND KERI (כתיב וקרי or קרי וכתיב), which comprises words differently read to what they are written, arising from the omission, insertion, exchanging, or transposition of a single letter. This class, by far the greater portion of the marginal readings, may properly be called VARIATIONS. ii. The class called KERI VELO KETHIV (קרי ולא כתיב), marginal insertions of entire words not to be found written in the text, of which the Massorah gives ten instances, viz., Judges x. 13; Ruth iii. 5, 17; 2 Sam. viii. 3, xvi. 23, xviii. 20; 2 Kings xix. 31, 37; Jer. xxxi. 38, l. 29; and, iii. The class called KETHIV VELO KERI (כתיב ולא קרי) omissions in the margin of entire words written in the text, of which the Massorah gives eight instances, viz., Ruth iii. 12; 2 Sam. xiii. 33, xv. 31; 2 Kings v. 18; Jer. xxxviii. 16, xxxix. 12, li. 3; Ezek. xlviii. 16. For a more extensive discussion on this subject, see the article KERI and KETHIV, in Kitto's Cyclopaedia.

¹⁰ As the glosses which constitute the Massorah magna are too extensive to be given entire in the margin of the text, by far the greater portion of them have been removed easily find what he wants.¹¹ Like a bear bereft of its young ones he hastened to this work, for he loved the daughter of Jacob. He summoned the workmen who were skilled in printing, and each one with his tools in his hand at once betook himself to the work. Seeing then that the work was urgent, and that it would redound to the glory of Israel, inasmuch as it will shew the nations and princes the beauty and excellence of our holy law, — for since it was committed to writing nothing has appeared like it, — and seeing, moreover, that its excellency was magnified in the eyes of the publisher, becoming, as it were, the chief corner-stone with him, I set my face to the fulfilling of his desire.

And now, since many of the people, and among them are even some of the different classes of our learned contemporaries, who in their heart value neither Massorah nor any of the methods of the Massorah, say, What profit can be derived from the Massorah? and for this reason it has almost been forgotten and lost, therefore I bestirred myself, as this afforded me the opportunity to do the work of the Lord, to shew the nations and the princes the value of the Massorah; for without it none of the sacred books, and particularly the Pentateuch, can be written with propriety and correctness.

We purpose, in the first place, to reply to and refute some of the למען ידון קודא בה למצוא מבוקשו,¹¹ וחכף כדוב שכול לא אחד לעשות, כי חפץ בבח יעקב, קרא לאומנים חבקים במיב חרפום, ואיש כלי מפצו בידו לעשות מלאכתו, ובראותי כי הדבר נחוצ, והועלת והפארת ישראל, להראות העמים והשרים יופי ומעלת תורתנו הקדושה, כי למן היום אשר נתנה בספר לא נעשה כמחכונתה, ונרלה מעלתה בעיני הבונים היתה לראש פנת, שמחי מנחה פני למלאה כספו:

ובזהיות כי ראיתי הרבה מחמון, ועמם חרבה מכתות חכמינו אשר עמנו היום כדורינו וז, אינם מעדיכין בלבם לא ממורה ולא הד מדרכי המסדה, באמרים כי מה הועלת ימשך להם ממנה, וכמעט נשכחה ונאכדה: לכן נקדתי חצני משום עת לעשות ל"י, להראות העמים והשרים מעלת המסדה, וכי זולתה אי אפשר לכתוב הספרים ביושר ובחיקון, וכל שכן ספר תורה:

וגם נשיב ונשיב על קצת מגדולי חכמינו to the end of the Hebrew Scriptures, where all the words on which there are any Massoretic remarks are classified and arranged in alphabetical order. This portion as has been remarked in the preceding note, is called Massorah finalis. The Aruch (ערך) is the celebrated Rabbinic and Aramaic Lexicon of R. Nathan B. Jechiel (born about 1080, died about 1106), which was finished A.D. 1101. It was first published sometime before 1480, in square letters, then in Pisauri 1517, then in Venice 1531, by Bomberg, in beautiful square letters, and several times since. The best edition, however, is that of Landau, in five volumes, Prague, 1819-1824. Etheridge's description of the time when this Lexicon was finished, as well as his remarks about the editio princeps (Jerusalem and Tiberius, Longmans, 1856, pp. 284, &c.), are incorrect. Comp. Steinschneider, Catalogus Libr. Hebr. in Bibliotheca Bodleiana, cols. 2040-2043. Zunz, Notes on Ascher's Edition of the Itinerary of Rabbi Benjamin of Tudela, London, 1841, vol. ii., p. 18; Kitto's Cyclopædia, s. v. NATHAN B. JECHEL.

¹¹ A description of this Rabbinic Bible has already been given, vide supra, p. 6, &c.

later great sages of blessed memory, who were nearer our time, and who maintained that the Keri and the Kethiv originated as follows: During the Babylonian captivity, when the sacred books were lost and scattered about, and those wise men who were skilled in the Scriptures were dead, the men of the Great Synagogue found different readings in the sacred books; and in every place where they met with a doubtful and perplexing case they wrote down a word in the text, but did not put the vowels to it, or wrote it in the margin and left it out in the text, not being sure as to what they found. Thus far their words. But I am far from adopting their opinion, as I shall shew in the sequel, and refute them from the Talmud.

I shall, secondly, notice the differences which in many places exist between our Talmud and the Massorites, and everywhere side with the latter, and state what we have learned from them.

I shall, thirdly, refute the heretics who dared to accuse us of wilfully altering and changing passages in our holy law, as in the case of the eighteen passages called the corrections of the Scribes, the removal of the Vav by the Scribes,¹² the Keri and the Kethiv, and the order of the construction.

I shall, fourthly, explain the plan which I have adopted, both in the Massorah parva and the Massorah magna, to facilitate the reader.

Let me then, firstly, do battle with the sages of blessed memory, who lived nearer our time, for they spoke unseemly against our holy law, saying that the Keri and the Kethiv exhibit the doubts which the men of the Great Synagogue entertained. And these are their names, and these their words.

Ephodi,¹³ in chap. vii. of his grammar, writes as follows: "Ezra האחרונים זכרונם לברכה, קרובים לזמנינו, אשר הניחו כי הקרי וכתב נמצאו כן, כי בנלות הראשונה אבדו הספרים, והשינים המלמול, והכמים יורעי המקרא מהו, ואנשי כנסת הנדולה מצאו מחלוקת בספרים, ובמקום שחשינים חספס והכלבול, כתבו חז' ולא נקדוהו, או כתבו מבחוץ ולא כתבו מבפנים, לחיותם מסופקים במה שמצאו, עד כאן לשונם. ועצתם רחקה מני, כאשר אבאר ואשינו עליהם מהנמרא:

וְגַם נָקִיד עַל הַחֲפֵשֶׁשׁ שִׁישׁ בֵּין נִמְרָא דִּילָן וּבֵין כְּעֵל הַמְסוּרָה בְּכַמָּה דּוּכְתִי, וּבְכֻלְהוּ נִקְיָי בְּחוֹן קְרוֹיָתוֹ, וְנִייתִי מִנְחוּן מִחַ דְּנִמְרָא: וְגַם נִשְׁבֵּי עַל הַמִּינִים הַדּוּבִידִים עֲלֵינוּ עֵתָה, כִּי שִׁנִּינוּ וַחֲפִצְנוּ בְּתוֹרָתֵינוּ הַקְדוּשָׁה, כְּמוֹ בִּיחַ מִלִּין חִיקוּן כּוֹפְרִים, וּבַעֲמֹד סוֹפְרִים: וְחֻקֵּי וְכֻתִּיב, וְנוֹהֵג מִנְחָם:

גַּם אֲבָרָא חֲסֵדָא אֲשֶׁר נִחְנְתִי בְּמִסְרָא קִמְנָה וּבְמִסְרָא נְדוּלָה, לְמַעַן יִרְוֶה חֻקֵּיָא בֵּה: וְקוֹדֶם אֶעֱדוּךְ מִלְחָמָה עִם הַחֲכָמִים

האחרונים זכרונם לברכה, הקרובים לזמנינו, כי דברו שלא כהוגן על חזרתנו הקדושה, באומרים כי הקרי וכתב היו ספקות נסתפקו אנשי כנסת הנדולה, ואלה שמותם ולשונם: האפודי¹³ בפרק שביעי מספרו ברקדוק

¹² An explanation of the phrases, 'emendations of the Scribes,' and 'the removal of Vav by the Scribes,' will be found below, p. 48, &c.

¹³ Ephodi (עפודי) is the appellation of R. Isaac b. Moses Ha-Levi, the celebrated grammarian and polemical writer, who flourished A.D. 1360-1412. It is a contraction of מִי שֶׁפִּיֵּשׁ דְּרוֹן, אֲמַר, thus says, or I, Prophiat Duran; and though it is the same the priest, who was the most accomplished and the chief of the Scribes, bestirred himself, and exerted all his powers to rectify what was wrong; and in like manner acted all the Scribes who followed him. They corrected all the sacred books as much as possible, in consequence of which they have been preserved to us perfect in the numbers of chapters, the verses, the words, letters, plene, defective, the abnormal and normal phrases and the like, and for this reason are denominated Scribes. To this effect they have also composed treatises, which are the books of the Massorah, and made the Keri and Kethiv in every passage in which they met with some obliterations and confusion, not being sure what the precise reading was." Thus far are his words.

But what surprises me still more is, that so holy a man as Kimchi¹⁴ should also utter similar things in his introduction to the earlier Prophets. The following is his language: "It appears that these marginal and textual readings originated because the sacred books were lost and scattered about during the Babylonian captivity, and the sages who were skilled in the Scriptures were dead. Whereupon the men of the Great Synagogue, who restored the law to its former state, found different readings in the books, and adopted those which the majority of copies had, because they, according to their opinion, exhibited the true readings. In some places they wrote down one word in the text but did not punctuate it, or noted it in the margin but omitted it from which he especially assumed after 1891, to conceal his real person from the Christians, who at this period of his life compelled him to abjure Judaism, he is also known by the name Prophetat Duran. His grammar, entitled the Grammar of Ephod (מקסדה אפוד), to which Jacob Ibn Adonijah refers, has only recently been published for the first time (Vienna, 1865), and the passage in question is to be found in p. 40.

כתב וזה לשונו: השלם ראש הסופרים עזרא הכהן הסופר נקד הצנו ושם כל מאמצי כתי לחקן המעוות, וכן עשו כל הסופרים הבאים אחריו, וחקנו הספרים החם בתכלית מה שאיפשר, עד שהיה זה פבה לחשאים שלמים במנות הפרשיות והפסוקים והתיבות והאותיות והמלא והחסר והזר והנוהג מנהג הלשון וזולת זה, ולזה נקראו סופרים, ועשו בזה חברים והם ספרי המסרה, ובמקומות אשר חשנים ההפסד והבלבול עשו הקרי וכתבי, לחיותו מסופק במה שמצא, עד כאן לשונו:

והקמחי וזכרנו לברכה¹⁴ תמהני על פה קדוש, שרבו מסכים לזה בחקרם לנוביאים ראשונים וזה לשונו: ונראה כי חמלות האלה נמצאו כן, לפי שבגלות הראשונה אבדו הספרים ונמלטו מלפול, והחכמים ירדעי המקרא מתו, ואנשי כנסת הגדולה שהחזירו התורה לישינה, מצאו מחלוקה בספרים, והלכו בהם אחד הרוב לפי דעתם על הבירור, כתבו הא' ולא נקדוהו, או כתבו מבחוץ ולא

¹⁴ The Kimchi here referred to is David Kimchi, also called Redak, ר' דוד קמחי = רד"ק (born A.D. 1160, died about 1235), who wrote commentaries on nearly the whole of the Old Testament, and who is the author of the famous Hebrew Grammar called Sefer and the Lexicon entitled Me'asef. He may be regarded as the teacher of Hebrew of both Jews and Christians throughout Europe. Comp. Kitto's Cyclopædia, s. v. KIMCHI, where an account is given of his contributions to Hebrew lexicography and Biblical exegesis.

the text, whilst in other places they inserted one reading in the margin and another in the text."¹⁵ Thus far is his language.

Don Isaac Abravanel,¹⁶ the memory of the righteous be blessed, refutes them in his introduction to Jeremiah in this manner, and these are his words:—"The opinion wherein all these wise men agree, and their conclusions, are far from being mine. For how can I believe with my heart, and speak with my lips, that Ezra the scribe found the book of the law of God, and the books of his holy Prophets, in an unsettled state, through obliterations and confusions? Is not the scroll of the law in which one letter is omitted illegal? How much more must it be so through the Keri and the Kethiv, which are found in the law, since, according to the Keri, many letters are wanting in the law," etc.?

Again he says, and these are his words, "Behold, I ask these men if, according to their prevailing opinion, the Keri and the Kethiv originated because they [Ezra and his associates] found various readings, and Ezra, not being sure which was the כתבו מבפנים, וכן כתבו בדרך אחר מבחוץ

ובדרך אחר מבפנים עד כאן:¹⁵

והשר דון יצחק אברבנאל וזר צדיק לברכה¹⁶ השיג עליהם בחקרמחו לספר ירמיה
וזה לשונו, והדעת הוה אשר הסכימו בו
החכמים האלה ועצתם דחקת מני, כי איך אוכל
בנפשי לחאמין, ואיך אעלה על שפתי, שמצא
עזרא הסופר ספר תורת האלהים וספרי נביאיו
מסופקים בחפסד ובלבול, וחלא ספר תורה
שחסר ממנו אות אחת הוא פסול, כל שכן
בקרי וכתוב שבאו בתורה, שכפי הקרי יחסרו
בתורה כמה וכמה מחאותיות וכולי:
עוד אמר וזה לשונו, הנה עוד אשאל

מאתם כפי הסברה הנוכרת, אם היה הקרי
וכתיב כפי מה שמצאו בספרים המחולפים, ולא אפשר לעזרא הסופר איזה הדרך מהם ישכון אור, ושם שהי הנסחאות אחר מבחוץ
ואחד מבפנים, אם כן איפה למח בפירוש
הכתובים נסמך חמיר על הקרי ולא על
הכתוב, ולמה עזרא בהיות הרבר אצלו מסופק, עשה הניקוד חמיר מסכים עם הקרי ולא עם
הכתוב, ואם היה כן דעתו, היה לו לשוב
נוסחת הקרי מבפנים, כי היא האמת והמסכמת
עם הנקודה, והכתוב ישם מבחוץ כיון שלא
הסכים בה דעתו:

שנית אם היה סתם זה חפסד ובלבול שנפל בספרים מצד הנלות, היה ראוי שיבא

right one, put down both readings, one in the margin and the other in the text; if it be so, why should we, in explaining the Scriptures, always follow the Keri, and not the Kethiv? And why should Ezra, who was himself doubtful, always have put the points in accordance with the Keri, and not with the Kethiv? And if he meant [to give preference to the Keri] he ought to have inserted the Keri in the text, as it is the true one and agrees with the points, and put the Kethiv in the margin because he did not approve of it.

"Moreover, if the obliterations and confusion to which the books were subject in consequence of the captivity gave rise to it [i. e., the ¹⁵ The quotation from Kimchi is from the Introduction to his Commentary on Joshua.

¹⁶ Abravanel, or Abarbanel, the famous statesman, philosopher, theologian, and commentator of Spain, was born in Lisbon in 1437, and died at Venice in 1508. For a list of his works on Biblical literature, see Kitto's Cyclopædia, s. v. ABRAVANEL.

Keri and the Kethiv], it ought to occur accidentally in the passage which happened to be obliterated, or in which [a doubtful reading] was found. Whereas thou wilt find in the law of God, in the section Lech L'Cha [Gen. xiv. 2],¹⁷ that Kethiv is צבאים, and the Keri is צבאים; and the same thing occurs a second time [ibid. verse 8]. Now, could this accidental obliteration always occur in this word צבאים? The same is the case with all, e. g. נער, which is written twenty-two times נער,¹⁸ and occurs only once as plene, in Deut. xxii. 19; so also בעפולים, which is always the Keri, and the Kethiv is טחורים, and the Kethiv is always ישכלנה.¹⁹ It is evident, therefore, that the thing is not as these sages thought, and may the Lord forgive them!"

Abbravanel, therefore, submits that the true account of the matter is as follows:—"Ezra the Scribe and his associates found the books of the law entire and perfect, but before betaking themselves to make the vowel points, the accents and the division of verses, they examined the text, when they found words which, according to the genius of the language and the design of the narrative, appeared to them irregular.

¹⁷ This is the name of one of the Sabbatic lessons, comprising Gen. xii. 1; xvii. 27. According to an ancient custom, the Jews to the present day divide the Pentateuch into fifty-four sections, to provide a lesson for each Sabbath of those years which, according to the Jewish chronology, have fifty-four Sabbaths, and thus read through the whole Book of the Law (תורה) in the course of every year. Each of these Sabbath sections, or sidras (סידרא), as it is called by the Jews, has a special name, which it derives from the first or second word with which it commences; and Jewish writers, when they quote a passage from the Pentateuch, instead of saying it occurs in such and such a chapter and verse, give, as in the instance before us, the name of the Sabbath lesson, because this practice obtained prior to the division of the Bible into chapters and verses. A full description of these Sabbatic lessons, as well as of the manners and customs connected therewith, is given in Kitto's Cyclop., art. HAFTARA.

¹⁸ In the present text we have only twenty-one times נער for נער, viz., Gen. xxiv. 14, 16, 28, 55, 57; xxxiv. 3 (twice), 12; Deut. xxii. 15 (twice), 16, 20, 21, 23, 24, 25, 26 (twice), 27, 28, 29.

¹⁹ The marginal reading טחורים for the textual בעפולים occurs six times (Deut. xxviii. 27; 1 Sam. v. 6, 9, 12; vi. 4, 5), and ישכלנה for ישכלנה four times (Deut. xxviii. 30; Isa. xiii. 16; Jer. iii. 2; Zech. xiv. 2). The former instances are given in the Massorah marginalis on 1 Sam. v. 6, and Ochla Ve-Ochla, section 170; and the latter in the Massorah marginalis on Isaiah xiii. 16, and the Ochla Ve-Ochla, section 169. Comp. also Megilla 25 b; Sopherim viii. 8; and infra, p. 50., &c.

Hence he concludes that this must have originated from one of two causes: (1) Either the writer, according to the degree of inspiration vouchsafed unto him, conveys by these anomalous expressions some of the mysteries of the law, and therefore he [Ezra] did not venture to expunge anything from the sacred books. Having thus perceived that it was written by the highest wisdom, and that there is one reason or another why the words are sometimes defective or plene, and why the phrases are anomalous, he left them in the text as they were written, and put the Keri in the margin, which simply explains the said anomaly in accordance with the idiom of the language and the design of the narrative; and of this nature are all the Keris and Kethivs in the Pentateuch. In like manner, when Ezra found the word בעפולים, which denotes heights, and which conveys no meaning to us, he put in the margin the word emerods; and this is also the case with the word ישנלנה, the root of which (שנל) is used with regard to a queen; he therefore put in the margin ישכבנה. (2) Or Ezra may have been of opinion that these anomalous letters and words are owing to the carelessness of the sacred speaker or writer; and this carelessness on the part of the prophet was like an error which proceeded from a prince. Ezra had therefore to explain such words in harmony with their connection, and this is the origin of the Keri which is found in the margin, as this holy Scribe feared to touch the words which were spoken or written by the Holy Ghost. These remarks he made on his own account, in order that he might explain such letters and words, and on that account he put them in the margin, to indicate that this gloss was his own. And there can be no doubt that they [i. e., Ezra and his associates] received the text in such a state from the prophets and the sages who had preceded them. Hence, if you examine the numerous Keris and Kethivs which occur in Jeremiah, and look into their connection, you will find that all of them are of this nature, viz., that Jeremiah wrote them through mistakes and carelessness, etc. Abravanel has a great deal more upon this subject in his introduction to Jeremiah: "Hitherto [he says further on] we have shewn that the Keri and the Kethiv, and the Keri velo Kethiv, are simply explanations. This is also the nature of the Kethiv velo Keri. When Ezra saw that words were put down in the text which had no meaning according to the simple sense of the words, he did not punctuate them, and therefore they are not to be read. From this you learn that the books, in which there are many such instances, shew that the speaker or writer was deficient in the syntax, or in his knowledge of orthography. Hence you find in Jeremiah alone eighty-one Keris and Kethivs, and in the books of Samuel, which Jeremiah wrote, the number of Keris and Kethivs rises to one hundred and thirty-three; . . . whilst in the Pentateuch, which proceeded from the mouth of the Lord, though it is four times as large as the book of Jeremiah, there are comparatively few, only sixty-five Keris and Kethivs."²⁰ Thus far his words.

הספור, השב בעצמו שחיה זה לאחר משה סבות, אם שכיון הכותב בדברים חורים החם פור מן המדות מסדרי תהורה כפי מעלה נבואתו, ולכן לא מלאה ידו לגשת למחוק דבר מספרי האלהים, כי חבין ברערו שבהכחמ יחידה נכתבו כן, ושלמבה מן הסבות נכתבו האותיות התסרות והלשונות חורים, ולכן הניחם בכתב מכפנים כמו שנכתבו, האמנם שם מבחוץ הקרי, שהוא פירוש הכתוב חור החוא כפי מבע הלשון ופשימות הענין, ומה המין חמצא כל הקרי וכתיב שכתורה, וככה כשמצא קורא שכתוב בתורה ובעפולים שהוא לשון נובה, ולא יז ענו מה הם הנבונים ההם, הוצרך לפרש בקרי שהם טחורים. וכן ישנלנה, לפי ששם שנל נאמר על המלכה, הוצרך לפרש בקרי ישכבנה. גם אפשר שהשם קורא שחיו בספרי הקרש היבות ומלות שלא נכתבו כן בודותם, אלא לכבה מן הסבות אם להיות האומר אותם בלתי מרקק כראוי אם בקצור ידיעת דקרוק הכתיבה, והיה זה מהנביא כשננה חיצואה מלפני השלים, ולכן הוצרך לפרש אמתה חמלה ההיא כפי הספור, והוא ענין הקרי אשר שם מבחוץ, כי ירא הסופר הקרוש לשלוח ידו בדברי המדברים ברוח הקרש וכתיבתם, ועשה זה בעצמו, רצוני לומר לפרש החיבה וחמלה ההיא, ושמו מבחוץ להיותו פירוש שפירש הוא מעצמו, ואין ספק שכך קבלו מהנביאים וחכמי הדור שקדמוהו, והנה רוב הקרי והכתיב שבא בספר ירמיה כשהענין בם

²⁰ There is a great difference of opinion about the number of these various readings, and the passages in which they occur. As it is impossible to discuss this question in a note of this nature, we subjoin the following table, which is the result of a careful perusal and collation of the Massorah, as printed in the Rabbinic Bible of Jacob b. Chajim, and which exhibits the numbers of the Keri and Kethivs in each book, according to the order of the Hebrew Bible:—

Genesis	25	Ezekiel	148	Proverbs	70
Exodus	17	Hosea	6	Job	54
Leviticus	6	Joel	1	Song of Songs	5
Numbers	11	Amos	3	Ruth	13
Deuteronomy	23	Obadiah	1	Lamentations	28
Joshua	38	Micah	4	Ecclesiastes	11
Judges	22	Nahum	4	Esther	14
1 Samuel	78	Habakkuk	2	Daniel	129
2 Samuel	99	Zephaniah	1	Ezra	38
1 Kings	49	Haggai	1	Nehemiah	28
2 Kings	80	Zechariah	7	1 Chronicles	41
Isaiah	55	Malachi	1	2 Chronicles	39
Jeremiah	148	Psalms	74	Total	1359

For a further discussion on this subject, we must refer to Kitto's Cyclopædia, s. v. KERI AND KETHIV.

He, in like manner, counts how many Keris and Kethivs occur in every book of the Bible, in order to shew which of the prophets was more conversant with the grammar. But all his views on this subject are far from my notions, as I shall presently shew, in refuting him.

The strictures, however, which he made upon Kimchi and Ephodi are good and apposite; and, in refuting his arguments, those of his opponents will be criticised at the same time, since both his decisions and the opinions of Kimchi and Ephodi are mere conjectures, whereas we rely solely upon the Talmud, which we acknowledge; for the heart of its sages was as large as the door of the temple; they are truth, and their words are truth.

Now I submit that Don Abravanel, of blessed memory, is perfectly right in saying that Ezra the Scribe and his associates found the books of the law entire and perfect, just as they were originally written.

But what he says in his first hypothesis, beginning with the words, "Either the writer, according to the degree of inspiration vouchsafed unto him, conveyed by these anomalous expressions some of the mysteries of the law," etc., till "he put the Keri in the margin, which simply explains the said anomaly in accordance with the idiom of the language;"²¹ all this is not correct, for in the Talmud we learn most distinctly, "R. Ika b. Abaja said in the name of R. Hanael, who repeated it in the name of Rab, What is meant by "and they read in the book, in the law of God, distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading" [Neh. viii. 8]? [Reply.] The words "they read in the book, in the Law of God," mean the Hebrew text; the expression "distinctly" denotes the Targum, "and gave the sense" means the division of the verses, whilst "caused them to understand the reading" signifies, according to some the dividing accents, and according to others the Massorah. R. Isaac said the pronunciation of certain words according to the Scribes, the removal of Var by the Scribes, the Keri

וכן חולק ומונה כמה מהקרי וכתוב כאו בכל ספר, להורות מי מהנביאים היה יותר בקי בדרקוק הלשון, וחשובותיו הרקו מני, כאשר אבאר ואשיג עליו:

אמנם קשיותיו אשר הקשה על הקמחי והאפודי טובים ונכוחים הם, ובחשיני והשיבי על תשובותיו יושנו גם כן הם, כי כל אלו התרוצים ודעת הקמחי והאפודי כולם הם מסבירה, ואנן ליה לן כי אם תלמודא דילן אשר קבלנו עלינו, כי לבן של ראשונים כפתחו של אולם, והם אמר ודבריהם אמר:

ואומר כמה שאמר חסד האברבנאל וכווננו לברכה, שזוהא חסודר וסיעתו מצאו ספרי תורה בשלמותם ותמותם כמו שנכתבו, אמר ויצוי דבר:

ואמנם כמה שאמר בתירוצ הראשון, אם שכיון הכותב כמו שנכתבו בדברים הזרים ההם וכולי, עד האמנם שם מכתוב חקרי שזוהא פירוש הכתוב הזר החזק כפי מבע הלשון ליתא לדבריו,²² רחא בהדיא נרסין במסכת נדרים פקד אין בין המודר, אמר דב איקא בר אביי אמר רב חננאל אמר רב, מאי דכתיב ויקראו בספר תורת אלהים מפורש ושום שכל ויבינו במקרא, ויקראו בספר תורה אלהים זה מקרא, מפורש זה חרנוב, ושום שכל אלו הפסוקים, ויבינו במקרא זה פסק מעמים, ואמרי לה אלו המסורת, אמר רב יצחק מקרא סופרים ועסוד

²¹ Vide supra, p. 45, &c.

Jeremiah in connection with the history of Zedekiah [xxxviii. 16].²⁴ And Rashi,²⁵ of blessed memory, also says that אֶת הַמְצִינָה occurs in Jeremiah. As for the removal of Vav by the Scribes, see below, in my reply to the heretics.

From this, then, it is evident that the whole of it is a law of Moses from Mount Sinai, and that Ezra the Scribe did not put the Keri in the margin to explain ungrammatical phrases; nothing appeared anomalous to Ezra, nor did he meet with any uncertainties and confusions, for the whole of it is the law of Moses from Mount Sinai, as stated above.

Moreover, I object to Abravanel's assertion, that Ezra, finding the word בְּעֵפֹלִים, which denotes heights, and which conveys no meaning to us, he had to put in the margin the word טְחוּרִים, emerods; and that this is also the case with the word יִשְׁנָלְנָה, the root of which (שָׁנַל) is used with regard to a queen, he therefore put in the margin יִשְׁכְּבֶנָה.²⁶

²⁴ We have already remarked that the Massorah gives ten instances of Keri velo Kethiv, or marginal insertions of entire words not to be found in the text; and eight instances of Kethiv velo Keri, or omissions in the margin of entire words written in the text (vide supra, p. 40). The list of the marginal insertions is as follows:—

בְּנֵי, sons of	Judges xx. 13	צְבָאוֹת, Sabaoth	Isaiah xxxvii. 32
פָּרָה, Euphrates	2 Sam. viii. 3	בָּאִים, they are coming	Jerem. xxxi. 88
אִישׁ, man	2 Sam. xvi. 21	לָהּ, to her	Jerem. l. 29
כֵּן, thus	2 Sam. xviii. 20	אֵלַי, to me	Ruth iii. 5
בְּנָיו, his sons	2 Kings xix. 37	אֵלַי, to me	Ruth iii. 17

This list is to be found in the Massorah marginalis on Dent. i. 1; and on Ruth iii. 17; Sopherim vi. 8; Ochla Ve-Ochla, section xevii. The list of the marginal omissions is as follows:—

אִם, if	2 Sam. xiii. 33	אִם, if	Jerem. xxxix. 12
אִם, if	2 Sam. xv. 21	דֶּרֶךְ, he shall tread	Jerem. li. 3
נָא, now	2 Kings v. 18	חֲמֵשׁ, five	Ezek. iii. 12
אִם, accusative sign	Jerem. xxxviii. 16	אִם, if	Ruth iii. 12

This list is given in the Massorah marginalis on Ruth iii. 12; Sopherim vi. 9, where, however, six instances only are enumerated, נָא, 2 Kings v. 18, and אִם, Jerem. xxxviii. 16, being omitted; and in the Ochla Ve-Ochla, section xeviii. Comp. also Levita's Massoreth Ha-Massoreth, p. 109, &c., ed. Ginsburg.

²⁵ Rashi is that celebrated commentator of the Old Testament and the Talmud, who is commonly but erroneously called Jarchi. The name Rashi רַשִׁי is a contraction of רַבִּי שְׁלֹמֹה יִצְחָק, Rabbi Solomon Isaki or Itzhaki = R. Solomon ben Isaac. He was born at Troyes, in Champagne, in 1040, where he also died, July 26th, 1105.

²⁶ Vide supra, p. 46.

הַנֶּפֶשׁ הַזֹּאת, ²⁴ וְרַשִׁי זְכַרְנוּ לְבִרְכָּהּ, ²⁵ פִּרְשׁ אֶת רַחֲמֵיכָה כְּחֵיב בִּירְמִיָּה עַד כֵּאֵן: וְעַמּוּד סוֹפְרִים עֵינִי לִקְמֹן בַּחֲשׂוֹבַת הַמִּינִים: הָא נִקְסִינָן רְכוּלָהּ הַלְכָה לְמִשָּׁה מַסִּינִי, וְלֹא שֶׁם עֲזָרָא הַסּוֹפֵר מִבְּחוּץ חֲקְרֵי שְׁחֹרָא פִּירוּשׁ חֲתוּב חוּר, וְגַם לֹא הִיָּה וּרְ בְּעִינֵי חָם וְשָׁלוֹם, וְלֹא הִשְׁנִי לֹא סָפַק וְלֹא בִּלְבּוֹל, כִּי כֻלָּה הַלְכָה לְמִשָּׁה מַסִּינִי, כְּדִנְרִינָא לְעִיל: וְתו קֶשֶׁה בְּעִינֵי מָה שֶׁאִמַּר וְהָ לְשׁוֹנוֹ, וְכֵכָה כְּשֶׁמִּצָּא עֲזָרָא שֶׁחָתוּב בַּחֲזוּרָה וּבְעֵפֹלִים שְׁחֹרָא לְשׁוֹן נֹבְחָה וְלֹא יִדְעָנוּ מִזֶּה חֵם הַגְּבוּהִים חָחֵם, חוֹצֵרֶךְ לְפָרֶשׁ בְּקֵרִי שְׁחָם מְחֻרִים, וְכֵן יִשְׁנָלְנָה לְפִי שֶׁשֶׁם שָׁנַל נִאֵמַר עַל הַמַּלְכוּת, חוֹצֵרֶךְ לְפָרֶשׁ בְּקֵרִי יִשְׁכְּבֶנָה, עַד כֵּאֵן לְשׁוֹנוֹ: ²⁶

This statement is not correct, since we are distinctly told in the Talmud: "Our sages submit, All the verses wherein are written indecent expressions, decent expressions are read in their stead, e. g., שָׁנָל instead of שָׁנָל [Deuteronomy xxviii. 30; Isa. xiii. 16; Jer. iii. 2; Zech. xiv. 2]; מַחֲרִים instead of עֲפָלִים [Deut. xxviii. 27; 1 Sam. v. 6. 9. 12.; vi. 4. 5]; רִבְיוֹנִים instead of חֲרִיוֹנִים [2 Kings vi. 25]; רִנְלִיָּהם instead of חֲרִיָּהם [2 Kings xviii. 27; Isa. xxxvi. 12]; שְׁנִיָּהם instead of שְׁנִיָּהם [2 Kings xviii. 27; Isa. xxxvi. 12]; לְמוֹצָאוֹת instead of לְמַתְרָאוֹת [2 Kings x. 27]."²⁷ And Rashi, of blessed memory, submits that the expression שָׁנָל is used for illegitimate cohabitation like that of dogs, as it is written in Nehemiah [ii. 6], where שָׁנָל is used in this sense. The Aruch, too, explains it in like manner under the words רִבְיוֹן, whereas שָׁנָל denotes the cohabitation of people who are legally married. Hence we see that it is not as Abravanel maintains; that מַחֲרִים did not originate from our ignorance of the word עֲפָלִים, and that שָׁנָל is not used in connection with a queen. Compare Rosh Ha-Shana, 4 a.

I am not going to reply to the words of Abravanel in his second hypothesis, viz., "that the anomalous expressions are owing to the deficiency of the writer in his knowledge of Hebrew or orthography," for I am amazed that such a thing should have proceeded from a man like him, of blessed memory. How can any one entertain such an idea in his mind, that the prophets were deficient in such matters? If it really were so, then Abravanel, of blessed memory, had a greater knowledge of Hebrew than they; and for the life of me I cannot believe this. And if they really did inadvertently commit an error, as he, of blessed memory, insinuates, how is it that the prophet or the inspired speaker did not correct it himself? Is it possible that eighty-one errors should occur in the Book of Jeremiah, and one hundred and thirty-three in the Book of Samuel, which he, of blessed memory, himself has counted, and has shewn was written by Jeremiah? Can we entertain the idea that a prophet, of whom it is said, "Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee, and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations" [Jer. i. 5], should have fallen into such errors? In conclusion, it appears that the Don, of blessed memory, had not seen the Talmud on this subject; for, according to the Talmud, there is neither light nor any glimpse of light in what he submits. It may, however, be that the Don, of blessed memory, entertained this strange opinion, not because he was unacquainted with the Talmud, but because he followed in this respect the steps of the great Rabbi, Maimonides,²⁸ of blessed memory, in the More Nebuchim, wishing to shew his ability to account for it without the Talmud.

וְלִיתָא לְדַבְרֵי דָּהּא בַּחֲדֵּי גִרְסִין סָף פֻּרְק חֲקוּרָא אַתְּ הַמְנִילָה עוֹמֵד, תְּנוּ רַבֵּן כָּל חֲמִרָאוֹת הַכְּחוּבִין בְּתוֹרָה לִנְגָּי קוּרִין אוֹתוֹן לִשְׁבָּת, כְּנוֹן יִשְׁלִנָּה יִשְׁכַּבְנָה, בַּעֲפוּלִים בְּמַחֲרִים, חֲרִיוֹנִים רִבְיוֹנִים, לֹאֲכֹל אֶת הַחֲרִיִּים, וּלְשַׁחֲוֹת אֶת יָמֵי שְׁנִיָּהם, לֹאֲכֹל אֶת צְוֹאֲתָם, וּלְשַׁחֲוֹת אֶת סִמְיָ רִנְלִיָּהם, לְמַתְרָאוֹת לְמוֹצָאוֹת, עַד כָּאן:²⁷ וּפִירֵשׁ רִשִׁי וּזְכוּנוֹ לְבִרְכָּה יִשְׁנִלְנָה לְשׁוֹן כְּלָבָא, כִּרְכָּחִיב וְהַשְׁנָל יוֹשֶׁבֶת אֲצִלוּ כְּלָבָתָא, וְכֵן פִּירֵשׁ בַּעֲדוֹךְ בְּעִיר דְּבִיּוֹן יִשְׁנִלְנָה מִשְׁמַע בִּנְוֹת בְּכָלָבָא, כְּמוֹ וְהַשְׁנָל יוֹשֶׁבֶת אֲצִלוּ יִשְׁכַּבְנָה מִשְׁמַע דֶּרֶךְ אִישׁוֹת בְּקִדּוּשִׁין וּבְחֻפּוֹת, עַד כָּאן לְשׁוֹנוֹ: אִם כֵּן אִינוּ לִפִּי שְׁלָא יִדְעֵנוּ מִה דָּם הַנְּבוּחִים ח.ס. וְגַם שֶׁם שְׁנָל לֹא נֹאמֵר עַל הַמְלָכָה, וְעִיין בַּפֶּרֶק קָמָא דְּרֵאשׁ חֲשֹׁנָה: וְלֹא יֵאָשִׁיב עַל דְּבַרֵּי חֲשֵׁר הַאֲבִרְבַּנְאֵל

בְּסִבָּה הַשְּׁנִיָּה, בְּאוֹמְרוֹ כִּי הַמְלָכָה נִכְתָּבוּ כֵּן בְּדוֹרוֹתָם לְכַבֵּשׁ מִן הַסְּבוּת, אִם לִהְיוֹת הָאוֹמֵר אוֹתָם בְּלִי מִדְּרֹק כְּרֹאֵי, אִם בְּקִצּוֹר יִדְעָה הַלְשׁוֹן הַעֲבֵרִי, וְאִם בְּקִצּוֹר יִדְעָה דְּרֹקוֹ הַכְּתִיבָה, כִּי חֲמַנִי עָלָיו אִם דְּבַר זֶה יֵצֵא מִפִּי אִדָּם וּבִנְתָּו וּזְכוּנוֹ לְבִרְכָּה, הִיעֲלָה עַל דַּעַת כִּי הַנְּבִיאִים קִצְרָה יָדָם בְּכָל אֱלֹהִים, אִם כֵּן הוּא וּזְכוּנוֹ לְבִרְכָּה חֵיה נְדוּל מִהֶם בְּדִרְקוֹ הַלְשׁוֹן הַעֲבֵרִי, וְחִי רֹאשִׁי כִּי לֹא אֲמִין דְּבַר זֶה, וְאִם חֵיה בְּשִׁנָּה כְּמוֹ שֶׁכָּתַב הוּא וּזְכוּנוֹ לְבִרְכָּה, לְמַה הַנְּבִיא אוֹ הַמְדַּבֵּר בְּרוּחַ חֲקֵשׁ לֹא חֲקָנוּ, הָאֵם הַשְּׁנִיָּה נִפְלָה

²⁷ Comp. Megilla, 25 b.; Sopherim ix. 9; Ochla Ve-Ochla, sections clxix., clxx., pp. 38, 114; Massorah marginalis on 1 Sam. v. 6, Isaiah xiii. 16; and supra, p. 45, note 19.

If an objector should urge, "Behold we do not find in the Talmud any more Keris and Kethivs, Kethivs velo Keris, removal of Vav by the Scribes, etc., besides those enumerated above, whereas the Massorah gives those and a great many others, I am therefore compelled to tell thee, that in the last-mentioned cases I am obliged to account for them in the manner of Abravanel, of blessed memory; since I believe that those only which are mentioned in the Talmud are the law of Moses from Mount Sinai, but not the others."

Now though it is true that the Massorah does indeed count all those which are mentioned in the Tract Sopher'm, and a great many more, yet this presents no insurmountable difficulty. For we learn, in the Mishna Sopherim, vi. 4, "R. Simon b. Lakish says three בספר ירמיה אחד ושמונים פעמים, ובספר שמואל שכתבו ירמיה, כמו שהוכיח הוא וזכרנו לברכה, רבו בו הקרי והכתיב בכמו מאה ושלשים ושלש, כמו שמנא הוא וזכרנו לברכה, היעלה על לב, נביא שנאמר עליו, במסם אצרך בבסן ידעתיך, ובמסם חצא מרחם הקדשתיך, נביא לנשים נתיך, יפול בשננות כאלה, סוף דבר נראה הם ושלום כאלו חסר וזכרנו לברכה לא ראה הנמרא, ואליבא דנמרא לא נהיד ולא צחיד מה דחירין, ואולי כי חסר וזכרנו לברכה היתה דוח אחרת עמו, ולא נעלם ממנו ח'ו הנמרא, כי דרך בדרך הרב הגדול הרמב"ם²⁸ וזכרנו לברכה במורה הנבוכים, להראות כחו, כי וולת הנמרא יש דרך להרץ:

ואם יקשה המקשה, הא לא אשכחנא בנמרא מקריין וכתבן וכתבן ולא קריין ועסור סופרים וכולי, אלא מה דחשיב בנמרא, ובמסרה חשיב כל הני ומפי עליהו כמה וכמה, ולקולם אימא לך דבשארית בעי להרוצי בדחירין חסר האברבנאל וזכרנו לברכה, דסלקא דעתך למיר הני דקחשיב בנמרא כולוהו הלכה למשה מסיני, ובשארית לא: ואברא דבמסרה חשיב כל הני ומפי עליהו ומפי ממה דמייחי במסכת סופרים, אבל לא קשה מיד, דנרסין במסכת סופרים פרק ששי, אמר רבי שמעון בן לקיש שלש be any foundation in what Don Abrahanel said, that the reason why Ezra did not venture to omit anything from the books of God is, that he considered them to be written by Divine wisdom, this cannot escape one of two alternatives: either Ezra knew that they were all the law of Moses from Mount Sinai, or that they were doubtful readings, as Kimchi, of blessed memory, and Ephodi maintained. And if you say that he did not know whether they were the law of Moses from Mount Sinai, why did he not expunge the reading of the one copy, and adopt that of the majority of codices, seeing that, in the case of the three codices found in the court of the temple, they followed the majority of copies? But you will perhaps argue that the MSS. were equally divided, and that he could therefore omit nothing, but was obliged to put the Keri in the margin. Then let such an one shew me how it is possible to read the Pentateuch, when [according to the Talmud] we must not read a single letter which is not written in the text. How then can it enter into one's mind that we should read the Keri, which, according to the opinion of Abrahanel, of blessed memory, Ezra the Scribe put down to explain the anomalous text, and leave out codex, again, there were only nine passages which had דא written with a Iod [as it is generally written דא with a Vav], whereas the other two had eleven passages; the readings of the two were declared valid, and those of the one invalid. These eleven instances, which are given in Abboth de Rabbi Nathan (cap. xxxiv.) and in the Massorah magna on Gen. xxxviii. 25, are as follows: Gen. xiv. 2, xx. 5, xxxviii. 25; Lev. ii. 16, xi. 39, xiii. 10, 21, xvi. 31, xxi. 9; Numb. v. 13, 14. It must be borne in mind that in all other instances דא with Vav retains its archaic and epicene character throughout the Pentateuch, and is used for both the masculine and the feminine. When the text of the Hebrew Scriptures was afterwards subjected to a critical revision, according to grammatical rules laid down by the Scribes, דא was changed into דא throughout the Prophets and the Hagiographa, wherever it referred to the feminine gender; and the few cases in which דא is still left, or in which the newly introduced דא refers to the masculine gender, are noted by the Massorah as Keri and Kethiv. Thus the Massorah on Ps. lxxiii. 16, gives five instances in which the textual reading is דא with Iod, when referring to the masculine gender; whilst the emended marginal reading is דא (viz., 1 Kings xvii. 15; Ps. lxxiii. 16; Job xxxi. 11; Eccles. v. 9; 1 Chron. xxix. 16), and, vice versa, three instances in which the textual reading has דא, when referring to the feminine gender (viz., 1 Kings xvii. 15; Isa. xxx. 33; Job xxxi. 11), whilst the marginal emendation has דא. These are also marked in the margin of the ordinary editions of the Hebrew Bible, as Keri and Kethiv, and Kethiv and Keri.

²⁸ Rambam רמב"ם, is a contraction of the initials of R. Moses ben Maimon, also called Maimonides, one of the most extraordinary Jewish philosophers who have lived since the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus. He was born March 30, 1135, in Cordova, and died December 13, 1204. His religio-philosophical work, entitled More Nebuchim, has recently been published by Munk, Paris, 1856-1866.

the textual reading, which was written by the finger of God? We are therefore bound to believe that all of them are a law of Moses from Sinai. Now the same question was put to Rashba of blessed memory, "How can we read בְּמַחְוֵי instead of בְּעֶפְזֵי, and יִשְׁכַּבְנָה instead of יִשְׁנֹנָה, which are not in the text?" When Rashba, of blessed memory, answered as follows:—

"As regards thy question, 'Seeing that in reading the law one must not change even a single letter, how can the Prelector read יִשְׁכַּבְנָה when the text has יִשְׁנֹנָה, or substitute another reading in any other passage for what is in the text, seeing that all the Kethivs in the law are according to the Massorah, and not according to the Keri?'"

"The answer is, that it is the law of Moses from Sinai, as it is written in Tract Nedarim [37 b], 'the pronunciation of certain words according to the Scribes, the removal of Vav by the Scribes, the Kethiv velo Keri, and the Keri velo Kethiv, &c., are all a law of Moses from Sinai.'" Thus far his language. From this it is evident that the interrogator did not know that it was a law of Moses from Sinai, since Rashba, of blessed memory, informed him that it was so; and now, seeing that it is a law of Moses from Sinai, there can be no more any question about it. See, moreover, that even Rashba, of blessed memory, supported himself therein on the above quotation from Nedarim, in spite of there being a great many more Keris and Kethivs than those enumerated in the Talmud, as already stated before. If these were doubtful readings, as Kimehi, of blessed memory, and Ephodi maintain, why were they not enumerated with the three instances of doubtful readings in Sopherim [vi. 4]? Seeing, then, that there are no more than three, it is evident that the others were not doubtful, for if they were doubtful they [the Sopherim] would in these, as in the former instances, have followed the majority of MSS., and not have put them in the margin, as we have stated above.

כחוב באצבע אלהים, אלא על כרחין איה לן למימר שכלם חלכה למשה מסני, ונשאלה שאלה וזו להרשב"א זכרונם לברכה, היאך נקרא שלא מן חתב בעפולים במחורים, ישננה ישכבנה, וחירץ הרשב"א זכרונם לברכה וזו לשונו:

וששאלת כיון שאסור לקרור ברורה אפילו אות אחת שלא מן חתב, היאך שלח צבור קורא ישכבנה והוא כחוב ישננה, וכן בכל חיבה שיש בה קרי וכתב, שכולם בחובים בחורה כפי המסורה ולא כפי חקרי: תשובה זו חלכה למשה מסני, וכמו שכתוב בנדרים פרק אין בין חמוד, מקרא סופרים, ועמוד סופרים, כתבן ולא קריין כולן חלכה למשה מסני ע"ל: מהתשובה איכא למידק דהשואל לא היה ידע דאינון חלכה למשה מסני, מדקחויין דהרשב"א זכרונם לברכה השיב זו חלכה למשה מסני וכולי: ומאחר דאינון חלכה למשה מסני תו ליכא לאקשוני מדי: ודא שנס דהרשב"א זכרונם לברכה נסתייע מחדיא דפרק אין בין חמוד, ואף על פי שבאו בחורה כמה וכמה קרי וכתב וזיל מח דמייח כנמריא כדפרכין לעיל, ואם היו ספקות כדפירש חקמדי זכרונם לברכה והאפודי, היאך לא מני לון בהדי תוך דמסכת סופרים, ומדקחויין דלא מני ולא קחשיב אלא שלש, אם כן שארא כולוהו לא חיו ספקי, ואם איתא דהוו ספקי הוה אול בהו בתר דובא, כדאוי בהנך דמסכת סופרים, ולא הוה חולה מבחין כדחציין לעיל:

There is then no more difficulty in the Don's, of blessed memory, remark, which is as follows: "there is no doubt that they [i. e., Ezra and his associates] have received [i. e., the Keri] from the prophets and sages of by-gone days." Thus far his language. To this I reply; Choose one of two positions. If you say that they received it from the prophets and sages of by-gone days, then this cannot escape one of the two alternatives. Either it [the Keri] was a law of Moses from Sinai, and they [the prophets and sages] told him [Ezra] that it [the Keri] ought to be so, or they did not tell him that such and such readings were a law of Moses from Sinai. If they have not told him that such and such a reading is a law of Moses from Sinai, then he clearly knew already that it [the marginal reading] ought to be so [is the correct one], since it was received so from the prophets. And if it be so, what then does Abravanel mean by saying that the sacred Scribe was afraid to touch

ולא יקשה מידי מה שכתב חסד וזכרון לברכה ווח לשונן, ואין כפך שכך קבלו מתנביאים וחכמי הדור שקדמוהו ע"ל: אשיב עליו מזה נפשך, מה נפשך שכך קבלו מתנביאים וחכמי הדור, לא ימנע מחלוקה, אם שהיה הלכה למשה מסיני, ונילו לו ש"ך צריך להיות, ואם שלא נילו לו שכך הלכה למשה מסיני, אם לא נילו לו שכך הלכה למשה מסיני, אם כן היה יודע בבידור שכך צריך להיות, שכך קבלו מתנביאים, אם כן מאי קאמר במה שאמר כי ירא חסופה הקדוש לשלוח ידו בדברי המדברים ברוח הקדש: והו קא קשה, אם כן הוא שכך קבלו מתנביאים וחכמי הדור, למה לא חיקנו הם דרונו מתנביאים וחכמי הדור, אלא על כרחין דבין הקרי ובין הכתיב כולחו הלכה למשה מסיני, כדאוכחנא לעיל מחזיא דפרק אין בין המורד:

ומה שאמר בסבה הראשונה, אם שכין הכותב בדברים הורים ההם מור מן הכורות מסתרי תחורה כפי מעלת נבואתו, ולכן לא מלאה ידו לנשח למחוק וכולי ע"ל, כך יש לנו להאמין בורא כמו שהניח הרב הגדול הרמב"ם⁸⁸ וזכרנו לברכה, ראש המקובלים האחרונים בחקדמיתו לביאורו לפירוש החומש עין שם, וחמדי על השר וזכרנו לברכה, כיצר הניח הדבר בספק שאחר כך בסבה השניה

any of the words which were spoken by the Holy Ghost? Moreover, there is another objection [to be urged]. If it be that they have received it from the prophets and sages of by-gone days, why have not the prophets and sages themselves corrected it? We are therefore bound to conclude that the Keri and the Kethiv are both a law of Moses from Sinai, as we have proved above from the Talmud [Nedarim 87, b.]

As to what Abravanel said in his first hypothesis, "that the writer, according to the degree of inspiration vouchsafed unto him, conveyed by these anomalous expressions some of the mysteries of the law, and therefore Ezra did not venture to expunge them from the sacred books," this is certainly true; as the great Ramban⁸⁸ of blessed memory, the chief of the later Kabbalists, has propounded it, in the Introduction to his Commentary on the Pentateuch (vide in loco). And for this very reason I am all the more astonished at Don Abravanel, of blessed memory, for having left the subject undecided, ascribing in his second hypothesis carelessness to Jeremiah, because of the anomalous expressions in נַפְשָׁהּ; his soul [Jerem. ii. 24], the Keri in the margin being נַפְשָׁהּ, her soul, fem., as is evident from the usage of the language. Whereas in fact this is one of the mysteries of the law connected with the Levirate law, and the initiated know it.

⁸⁸ For Ramban, or Nachmanides, see above, p. 39.

Thus we learn from these and similar arguments that the Keri velo Kethiv, the Kethiv velo Keri, and all the Massoretic statements, are a law of Moses from Sinai, and not as the afore-mentioned sages propound, which is evident from the Talmud [Nedarim 37 b] quoted above.

We do indeed find that the Talmud differs in many places from the Massorah, as we see in the Tract Nidda [33 a], where וְחַנּוּשָׁה, and he that beareth [Levit. xv. 10], is written וְחַנּוּשָׁה, without Vav.

Tossafoth⁸⁴ thereupon remarks, "It is strange that the reading of the Massorah is plene;" and concludes that the Talmud in fact does sometimes differ from the Massorah, as we find in Sabbath [55 b] on the sons of Eli, where מַעֲבִירִים [1 Sam. ii. 24] is quoted. And this is the remark of the Talmud: [query] "Is not the reading מַעֲבִירִים? Whereupon R. Hunnah b. R. Joshua said the reading is מַעֲבֵרִים."

Now Rashi of blessed memory remarks on this passage, "I cannot כתב על ירמיה בורת הלשון, כמו באות נפשו שאפה רוח שקרי במהוץ נפשה, שכך נראה ממעב חלשון, וחרבר סיד מסורות חתורה בסור היבום, והמשכיל יבין:

נקמטין מכולהו הני פרכי וכהוותן רכל מלי דקריין ולא כתבן, וכתבן ולא קריין, וכולהו דרכי דמסורה, כולהו הלכה למשה מסיני, ורלא כאשר כתבו החכמים האלה דלעיל, כדנרסין מהנמרא דנדרים רבפרק אין בין המורד דאיייתין לעיל:

ומיהו אשכנא בכמה דוכתי דהלמורא חולק על המסורה, כדאשכחן במסכת נדה פרק בנות כותים נבי משכב תרחון ועליון, נבי והנושא אותם יכבס בגדיו ורחץ בשרו במים, והנשא כתיב חסר ויו:

והקשו התוספות⁸⁴ שם, חזמה דבמסורת הוא מלא, וחדרצו ומיהו מצינו שהתלמוד חולק על המסורה, כדאשכחן במסכת שבת פרק במה בהמה נבי בני עלי מעבירים כתיב, וזה לשון הנמרא שם, והכתיב מעבירים, אמר רב הונא ברי רב יהושע מעבירים כתיב, עד כאן: ונתקשה לדשי' וזכרנו לברכה וז"ל, קשה

⁸⁴ Tossafoth תוספות denotes those additions or supplementary glosses to Rashi's Commentary on the Talmud which are found along with the commentary of Rashi in every edition of the Talmud. The disciples of Rashi, finding that the expositions of their master might be extended and improved, set about to continue his work of exposition immediately after his death, filling up every gap, and using up every scrap which their immortal teacher left. Their reverence for him, however, was so great, that they would not put down their opinions in an independent manner, but denominated them תוספות additions, and hence they derived the name Tossafists. The first Tossafists consisted chiefly of Rashi's own relations, his two sons-in-law, R. Meier b. Samuel and R. Jehudah b. Nathan, called by way of abbreviation Riban (רבי ירחיה בן נתן = ריב"ן), his three grandsons, R. Isaac, R. Samuel, and R. Jacob Tam, sons of R. Meier, who are respectively called from their initials Ribam (רבי יצחק בן מאיר = ריב"ם), Rashbam (רבי שמואל בן מאיר = רשב"ם), and R. Tam, and lastly R. Isaac ben Asher of Speier, called Riba (רבי יצחק בן אשר = ריב"א), also a relative of Rashi's. Comp. Graetz, Geschichte der Juden, vol. vi., p. 170, etc., Leipzig, 1861; and vol. vii., p. 129, etc., Leipzig, 1863.

understand how this sage is here cited, for I am of opinion that the whole passage is spurious, and that he never said it, since the reading of the most trustworthy Codices is plene, and since it is not mentioned in the great Massorah, where all the words in which the Jod is in the Kethiv but not in the Keri are numbered and rubricated. Besides, the whole question is irrelevant, as the meaning of מַעֲבִירִים is not to transgress, but to circulate a report; and this is what Eli said, 'No, my son, it is not a good report which I hear the people of God circulate about you [1 Sam. ii 24];' מַעֲבִירִים is the plural, and refers to עַם יְהוָה, the people of Jehovah, and not to the sons of Eli, who were the transgressors themselves, and did make others to transgress." Thus far his language.

Tossafoth again comments thus upon the passage; and this is its language: "Our Talmud differs from our copies of the Bible, which read מַעֲבִירִים, and we find a similar difference in the Jerusalem Talmud on Samson, where it has, 'And he judged Israel forty years;' and submits it is evident that the Philistines feared him [i. e., Samson] twenty years after his death, as well as twenty years during his life-time," whereas our copies of the Bible read twenty years [Judges xvi. 31]. Thus far its language.

To me it appears, however, that there is no difficulty in it; for what the Talmud speaks about Samson refers to the Midrashic interpretation, viz., "Why is the verse, that he judged Israel twenty years, repeated twice? R. Acha answered, From this we see that the Philistines feared him [i. e., Samson] twenty years after his death, just as they did twenty years before it, and this makes forty years." Hence the Talmud does not say, Why is it written in the text, "he judged Israel forty years?" but simply, "he judged forty years," that is, according to the Midrash. And now everything comes out right when thou lookest into it. Thus far.

Now I wonder at Rashi,—who was versed in the Massorah and Masso-בעיני שם החכם הנזכר כאן, כי אומר אני שמעתי נדרול הוא ולא נלה לזאת מלחא, שהרי בספרים מונחים כחוב מעברים מלא, וגם במסורת הנדולה במקום שמניין שם כל התיבות שכתוב בהן יוד דלא קרינן לא נמנה זה והם מניין על פי החשבון זה אינה קשיא, דחא מעברים לאו לשון עבירה הוא אלא לשון ויעבירו קול במחנה, והכי קאמר להו עלי, לא מוכח השמועה אשר אנכי שומע את עם "מעבירין ומכריזין וקובלין עליכם, והאי מעברים לשון רבים הוא, ואעם "קאי ולא אבני עלי, שהרי הם היו עובדים ולא היו מעבירים את אחרים, עד כאן לשונו:

וכתבו החיטופות על זה וזל, החלמוד שלנו חולק על ספרים שלנו שכתוב בהם מעבירים, וכן מצינו בירושלמי בשמשון והוא שפם את ישראל ארבעים שנה, מלמד שהיו פלשתיים יראים ממנו עשרים שנה אחר מותו כמו בחייו, ובכל הספרים שלנו כתוב עשרים שנה, עד כאן לשון החיטופות:

ולו נראה דלא קשה מידי הא דשמעון משמע כבדרש, למה נאמר שני פעמים כי שפם את ישראל עשרים שנה, אמר רב אחא מלמד שהיו פלשתיים יראים ממנו עשרים שנה אחר מותו ועשרים אחר חייו והיינו ארבעים בתרי וימני, דחלמודא לא אמר מאי דכתיב והוא שפם את ישראל ארבעים שנה, אלא והוא שפם את ישראל ארבעים שנה דמשמע כבדרש, והשתא אחי שפיר ודוק, עד כאן: ותמימה לי על רש"י זכרנו לבדכח, דחא retic conclusions, as we have seen in the above quotation from the Tract Sabbath [55 b] on the sons of Eli, where he argues from the Massorah against R. Hunna b. Joshua, and concludes that the said passage in the Talmud is spurious,—that he should in various other places entertain opinions contrary to those of the Massorah. Thus, for instance, he writes in his Commentary on Gen. xxv. 6, “The reading is פְּלִנְשִׁים without the ך, to shew that it was only one concubine i. e., Hagar, who was identical with Keturah, according to the opinion of Bereshith Rabba.”⁸⁵ He also remarks on Numbers vii. 1, that the reading is כִּלְתָּ and not כָּלוּתָ; whereas the Massorah most distinctly remarks פְּלִנְשִׁים is “twice entirely plene,” viz., in Gen. xxv. 6, and in Esther ii. 9. Thus also the Massorah parva remarks on כָּלוּתָ, Numb. vii. 1, “Not extant, plene.”

And again Rashi remarks, in his Commentary on the Pentateuch, the reading is מְזוּזָה [Dent. vi. 9] in order to shew that even if a door has only one post, it requires a Mezuzah.⁸⁶ Now I wonder at this, for we find in the Massorah that it is written with a ך between the ז and the ת. Rashi, of blessed memory, however, adopts the opinion of Rabbi Meier in Menachoth, 34 a, where we learn, “R. Papa, happening to call at the house of Mar Samuel, saw there a door which had only one post on the left side, and yet had a Mezuzah, and asked, According to whom is this? According to Rabbi Meier [was the היה בקי במסורה וסבירא ליה כדעת בעלי המסרה, דהא לעיל גבי בני עלי דפרק במה בחמה, הקשה מהמירה על רב הונא בריה דרב יהושע וכתב, ואומר אני שטעות נדול הוא וכולו, והא אשכחן בכמה דוכתי רסבירא ליה דלא כדעת בעלי המסרה, גבי ולבני הפילנשים כתב בפירוש החומש פלנשם כתיב חסר יו"ד שלא היה אלא פלנש אחת, והיא חג' והיא קמורה מלשון בראשית רבה,⁸⁵ וכן ויחי ביום כלות משה כלת כתיב ער כאן. ובהדיא במסרה כתיב הפילנשים ב' מלא דמלאים, דין ועל יד הני שומר הפילנשים, וכן ביום כלות משה כתיב במסרה הקמנה לית מלא:

ותו אשכחן פירש בפירוש החומש בפרשה ואחזקן מונוח ביהיך מונוח כתיב, שאין צריך אלא אחת,⁸⁶ ותימא דבמסורה הוא כתיב מלא בוי' בין ויין לחי', ורש"י זכרנו לזכרה סבר לה כרבי מאיר במנחות פרק הקומץ את המנחה, גבי הא דנרסין רב פפא איקלע לבי מר שמואל, הוא חהוא פתחא דלא חוה ליה פצימא אלא משמאל ועבירה ליה מוזה, אמר ליה כמאן, כרבי

⁸⁵ Bereshith Rabba is that part of the Midrash Rabba which treats on Bereshith, or on the Book of Genesis. For an account of this Midrash, we must refer to Kitto's Cyclopadia, s. v. MIDRASH.

⁸⁶ Mezuzah with the Jews denotes the piece of parchment on which is written Dent. vi. 4-9; xi. 13-21, which they regard as containing the injunction to inscribe on the door-posts the words of the law. This slip of vellum thus written upon is then enclosed in a cylindrical tube of lead, cane, or wood, and to the present day is nailed to the right door-post of every door. A detailed description of this institution is given by Maimonides, Jad Ha-chezaka, Hilchoth Mezuzah, vol. i., p. 93, etc., ed. Immanuel Athias, Amsterdam, 1702; Joreh Deah, §§ 285-292; and in Kitto's Cyclopadia, s. v. MEZUZAH.

reply.] Whereupon it was asked, Where is this remark of Rabbi Meier? [Reply.] We find that a house which has a door with only one post, Rabbi Meier says it ought to have a Mezuzah, but the sages say it ought not. [Query.] What is the reason of the sages? [Reply.] Because the text has מְזוּזוֹת in the plural [thus shewing that two posts were required]. [Query.] And what is the reason of Rabbi Meier? [Reply.] For we learn that it is מְזוּזוֹת plural, whence I see that it cannot be less than two; and when מְזוּזוֹת is again mentioned in another verse, where it is superfluous, it is to teach us that it comes within the exegetical rule, inclusion after inclusion; and every inclusion after inclusion is meant for diminution; hence we must have a Mezuzah when there is only one post to the door.⁸⁷

Thus says Rabbi Ishmael, &c. [upon which Tossafoth remarks]; and accordingly it would appear that the reading is מְזוּזוֹת plene with two Vavs, and not defective with one Vav; and this is the remark of Rabbi Ishmael, who says that the text is of paramount importance, i. e., that we must explain it according to the written text or the Kethiv, just as we find in Sanhedrin, 4 b, in the case of טִפְפוֹת. But the fact is that we cannot infer anything from this; since we find Rabbi Akiva, who maintains that the marginal reading is of primary consideration, i. e., that we must be guided by the Keri as in the case of טִפְפוֹת, yet he himself admits that text is of paramount importance."

Again, in Sabbath, 103 b, Tossafoth is at variance with Rashi, of blessed memory, where we find that Rabbi Jehudah b. Bethira says:—"The Scriptures use וְיִסְכְּיָהֶם [Numb. xxix. 19] with regard to the second day of the feast of tabernacles, וְיִסְכְּיָהֶם [ibid., verse 31] with regard to the sixth day, and מִשְׁפָּטָם [ibid., verse 38] with regard to the seventh day,³⁸ whence we obtain the final ם [of the first], the ך [from the second], and the final ם [from the third word]; and have therein an intimation from the law about the ceremony of pouring out water on this festival. Whereas Rashi, of blessed memory, reads [Succa, 46 b] בְּמִשְׁפָּחָם in connection with the eighth day of the festival [i. e., at the end of verse 37,] and בְּמִשְׁפָּחָם in connection with the seventh day [i. e., at the end of verse 33].³⁹ Now Tassafoth criticises Rashi, and these are the words of Tassafoth: "We read בְּמִשְׁפָּחָם on the seventh day, as is evident from Taamith, 4 b, and from the Massorah magna, and not as Rashi, who reads on the eighth day." Thus far the remark of Tassafoth.

מאיר, ושיילין עלה מאי רבי מאיר, דתניא בית שאין לו אלא פנים אחד, רבי מאיר מחייב במזוזות וחכמים פוסדים, מאי מעמא דרבנן, מזוזות כתיב, מאי מעמא דרבי מאיר, דתניא מזוזות, שומע אני מעום מזוזות שנים, כשהוא אומר מזוזות בפרשה שניה, שאין תלמוד לומר רבי אחד רבי, ואין רבוי אלא למעם מעמו הכתוב למזוזות אחת? דברי רבי ישמעאל וכולי עכ"ל הנמא שם: ואף על גב דהוה משמע קצת דכתיב מזוזות מלא בשני ווין ולא מזוזות חסר, דהא רבי ישמעאל איח ליה ים אם למסורת, פירוש לדרוש על פי הכתב, כדגרסינן בריש מנחדין נבי למספת, מיהו אין דאיה מוז, דהכי נמי אשכחן רבי עקיבא דאיה ליה ים אם למקרא פירוש לדרוש כפי הדבור הקרוי כההיא דלמספת, ובפרק כל שעה איה ליה ים אם למסרה תוספת עד כאן:

ותו בפרק הבונה הקשו התוספת על רש"י וזכרנו לברכה גבי הא דתניא רבי יהודה בן בתירא אומר נאמר בשני ונסביהם, בששי

⁸⁷ To understand the discussion given in the text, it is necessary to remark that, according to the exegetical rules of the ancient Rabbins, the Bible never repeats a word twice without designing to convey thereby a special meaning. Accordingly, if a thing is repeated twice, and the repetition appears superfluous, it is explained as implying more than one statement would convey. But if the repetition cannot be explained as implying inclusion, it is taken to denote exclusion. This rule is called אין רבוי אדר, ריבוי איח לטעם, inclusion after inclusion, effecting exclusion. Comp. Kitto's Cyclopædia, s. v. MIDRASH, p. 170, rule iv.

Moreover, in Menachoth, 34 b, Rashi, of blessed memory, does not animadvert upon the Talmud, which reads differently from the correct Codices, as he animadverted in connection with the sons of Eli [vide supra, p. 20], and yet these are the words of Menachoth: "The sages propound, 'Rabbi Ishmael said לְמִטָּפָה לְמִטָּפָה לְמִטָּפָה לְמִטָּפָה, the four compartments [in the phylactery] are indicated.'⁴⁰ Thus far the words of the Talmud. In the Correct codices, however, as well as in the Book of the Crowns,⁴¹ the reading is as follows, לְמִטָּפָה

³⁸ These words also occur in connection with the other days of the feast, but without the letters in question; and as, according to the Talmudic laws of exegesis, no superfluous letter is ever used in the Bible without its having a recondate meaning (compare Ginsburg's Commentary on Ecclesiastes, p. 30, &c., Longman, 1861); these three letters have been combined into מִימֵי, water. This exegetical rule, which is called גִּזְרֵי וְיִחְסֵן, letters taken from one word and joined to another, or formed into new words, will be found in Kitto's Cyclopædia, s. v. MIDRASH, p. 172, rule iii.

³⁹ The passage must have been altered since the day of the Tassafoth, and made conformable to the present text of the Bible, as in my copy of the Talmud there is no difference between Rashi and the Massoretic text.

⁴⁰ The word מִטָּפָה occurs only three times (Exod. xiii. 16; Deut. vi. 8, xi. 18); in two instances it has no י (Deut. vi. 8, xi. 18), and in the third (Exod. xiii. 16), there is a י after the first ם, i. e., מִימֵי; hence R. Ishmael regards it as a dual, and makes of the three words four, to obtain the four compartments in the phylacteries. As the limits of a note do not permit of a detailed description of these compartments, we must refer to Kitto's Cyclopædia, art. PHYLACTERIES, for it.

⁴¹ The Book of Crowns (סֵפֶר חֲנִי) to which Jacob b. Chajim refers, is an ancient treatise, containing Massoretic rules on the ornamental letters. It has only just been published, for the first time, by Burges, Paris, 1866. The passage in question is to be

[in Deut. vi. 8; xi. 18] and וְלִטְוֶפֶת [Exod. xiii. 16], but there is no ו between the ט and the פ; yet I myself have seen that in the ancient Book of the Crowns, even וְלִטְוֶפֶת, in Deut. xi. 18, is written with a ו after the the first ט. Still we may rely upon the authors of the Tossafoth, since they saw the Book of Crowns, and know more thoroughly about plene and defective than we know. Tossafoth on Menachoth [34 b] observes as follows: ⁴² "In Deut. vi. 8 and xi. 18, the reading is וְלִטְוֶפֶת, and in Exod. xiii. 16, וְלִטְוֶפֶת, according to the correct Codices, but there is no ו between the ט and פ," and asks, "How can a dual be made out of it? If we could apply to it the exegetical rule, letters taken from one word and joined to another, or formed into new words, it would be all right, but we find it only applied to letters at the end and beginning of words, but not in the middle. Thus, for instance, in Zebachim, 24 b, the first ט is taken over from מִדָּם, from the blood, to הַפֶּרֶךְ, of the bullock, making it רֶכֶּךְ מִדָּם, the blood of the bullock [Exod. xxxix. 12]. Thus also in Baba Bathra, 111, the ו is taken from the end of נַחֲלָתוֹ, his inheritance, and the ל from the beginning of לְשָׂאָרוֹ, to his kinsmen, and made into a separate word לוֹ, i. e., וְנָתַתָּם אֶת נַחֲלָת שְׂאָרוֹ לוֹ, and ye shall give the inheritance of his wife to him, i. e., the husband [Numb. xxvii. 11]. To this, Rabbi Tam⁴³ replies, that the first ו of וְלִטְוֶפֶת [i. e., the copulative] is taken from the beginning of the word and put between the ט and פ, thus reading וְלִטְוֶפֶת, as we find it done in Baba Mezi'ah [54 b], on Lev. xxvii. 27, where the ו found on p. 9. It must, however, be remarked that in the present recension it is spelled לִטְוֶפֶת, both in Exod. xiii. 16 and Deut. vi. 8. Comp. also the Sepher Tegin, pp. 18, 19.

⁴² As Jacob ben Chajim has somewhat abbreviated this quotation from Tossafoth, and thereby made it difficult to translate, I have translated the whole of it as found in the Talmud.

⁴³ Jacob Tam was born at Remers about 1100, and died about 1171. He was the grandson of the immortal Rashi, and was a very distinguished Talmudist, Tossaphist (vide supra, p. 57, note 34), Grammarian, and Commentator. The appellation Tam (ט) = the pious, the saint, he obtained in after life because of his great piety, and in allusion to Gen. xxv. 27, where his namesake, the patriarch Jacob, is denominated Tam.

is taken from וְיָסַף, and he shall add, converted into the allied letter י, and put between the ת and ו of וְיָסַף, thus reading וְיָסַף. But Tossafoth objects to this explanation, on the ground that the Talmud asks further on, "If this can be done, let us apply it also to the things devoted to the sanctuary, where it is likewise written וְיָסַף חֲמִשִּׁית [Lev. xxvii. 15]?" And the answer is, "Even if you take away the י from וְיָסַף, and put it to the end of חֲמִשִּׁית, it would only be חֲמִשִּׁית making no plural." But now [if Rabbi Tam's principle of applying this exegetical rule be right] we might put the י in the middle of the word, so as to obtain חֲמִשִּׁית plural. It is therefore evident that we never put the letters except at the end of the word, as is the case with all the instances which I have adduced." Thus far the words of Tossafoth. Rashi, of blessed memory, too, quotes the same principle [in his Commentary, on Baba Meziah, 54 b], that we only add to the beginning and end of words, but that in the middle the letters must remain as they are [vide in loco]. And we cannot urge in such a case that we cut up the Scriptures with too sharp a knife, as it is urged in all other places, because it cannot be called cutting except when the words are displaced, as it is remarked there [i. e., in Baba Bathra, 111] in connection with the verse "and ye shall give his inheritance," &c. [Numb. xxvii. 11], against Rabbi Abja, who wanted to do it; and Rabbi said to him, "Thou cuttest the Scriptures with a sharp knife." Thus far his reply.

It appears difficult to me, that when we are distinctly told in the Talmud [Megilla, 24 b.], "The sages say that all passages which are written in the law in indelicate expressions are rendered decent by the Keri, as, for instance, יִשְׁכְּבֶנָּה instead of יִשְׁנֹנָה [Deut. xxxviii. 30; Isa. xiii. 16; Jer. iii. 2; 1 Sam. v. 6, 9, 12; vi. 4, 5, 17]; חֲחִירִים instead of עֲפָלִים; the Massorah should only give six instances where the Kethiv is עֲפָלִים, and the Keri חֲחִירִים [Deut. xxviii. 27; 1 Sam. v. 6, 9, 12; vi. 5, 6], and omit the one which occurs in 1 Sam. vi. 12; and, indeed, all our best Codices do the same. Now, I cannot account for this in any other way except in the manner already stated above, viz., that the Talmud is sometimes at variance with the Massorah.

In Bereshith Rabba, Rabbi Idia remarks on Psalm cv. 22, that the Kethiv is שָׁרִי, his prince, without a ^י [i. e., in the singular], and that it refers to Potiphera. Now the difficulty is, that we do not find this ^י omitted in any Codex; nor is it mentioned in the Massorah magna among the number of fifty-six passages where the ^י is omitted in the text and found in the Keri;⁴⁴ and there is no way of accounting for this again, except as I accounted for the manner of the Talmud, viz., that it disagrees with the Massorah.

It is very suprising that we find Rashi, of blessed memory, and Saadia Gaon,⁴⁵ giving Keris and Kethivs which are not to be found הספרים המדויקים שלנו, ולא ידענו מה לתרוצי, אלא כדחריצא לעיל, דאדורחיה רחלמורא לפלוגי על המכורה:

ובבראשית רבה פנאחי על פסוק לאכור שריו בנפשו, אמר רב אידי שרו כתיב חסר י"ד זה היה פומיפר, וקשה כי לא נמצא בשום ספר שיחיה חסר, וגם במסרה רבא לא נמצא בהשכון החמשים ושש חסר י"ד במצעות חיבות וקריין,⁴⁴ ואין דרך לתרוצי כי אם כמה דחריצא, דאדורחיה רחלמורא לחכמי המסורה:

ואיכא לחמיו מובא כמה דאשכחית לדש' וזכרנו לברכה ולרבינו סעדיה גאון,⁴⁵

⁴⁴ The fifty-six words which are in the textual reading without Jod (mostly indicating the plural) in the middle, but have Jod in the marginal reading, are as follows:—

צוארו . . . Gen. xxxiii. 4	אלמנרו . . . Jerem. xv. 8	Job xxvi. 14
ועמור . . . Exod. xxvii. 11	וכו . . . Jerem. xvii. 11	Job xxxvii. 12
ענו . . . Numb. xii. 3	מכררו . . . Ezek. xvii. 21	Job xxxix. 30
בני . . . Joshua viii. 11	פארתו . . . Ezek. xxxi. 5	Job xl. 17
חריצו . . . Joshua xvi. 3	עולו . . . Ezek. xl. 26	Job xxxix. 23
מרינו . . . 1 Sam. ii. 9	וחלוק . . . Ezek. xl. 22	Job xxxi. 20
על . . . 1 Sam. ii. 9	וחכורו . . . Ezek. xl. 22	Job xxxviii. 41
למשחורו . . . 1 Sam. x. 21	בצארו . . . Ezek. xlvii. 11	Prov. vi. 13
ואנשו . . . 1 Sam. xxiii. 5	פרו . . . Habak. iii. 14	Prov. xxvi. 24
בבנרו . . . 2 Sam. i. 11	שער . . . Obad. 11	Prov. xxii. 25
שכלחו . . . 2 Sam. xii. 20	דרשו . . . Ps. xxiv. 6	Prov. xxx. 10
רחמו . . . 2 Sam. xxiv. 14	חצו . . . Ps. lviii. 8	Ruth iii. 14
משחרו . . . 1 Kings x. 5	חסרו . . . Ps. cvi. 45	Ezra iv. 7
ברכו . . . 1 Kings xviii. 42	דברו . . . Ps. cxlvii. 19	Lament. iii. 39
בסרו . . . 2 Kings v. 9	צבאו . . . Ps. cxlviii. 2	1 Sam. xxi. 14
כס . . . 2 Kings iv. 34	חקו . . . Job xiv. 5	Song of Songs ii. 11
מזבחו . . . 2 Kings xi. 18	בקדשו . . . Job xv. 15	Ps. cv. 40
צפי . . . Isa. lvi. 10	עלמו . . . Job xx. 11	Numb. xi. 32
משל . . . Isa. lii. 5	יודעו . . . Job xxiv. 1

They are enumerated in the Massorah finalis under the letter Jod, p. 34 a, cols. 2 and 3; and in the Ochla Ve-Ochla, section cxviii., pp. 33 and 104. It must be remarked, that this list only registers such words as occur once as defective, and therefore excludes many other words which likewise want the Jod plural, but which occur more than once. Comp. also Levita's Massoreth Ha-Massoreth, p. 183, ed. Ginsburg.

⁴⁵ Saadia Gaon (סעדיה גאון) ben Joseph Ha-Pithomi, the celebrated philosopher, commentator, and translator of the Bible into Arabic, was born at Fajum, in Upper in any of the Massoretic work. Thus, for instance, Rashi, of blessed memory, in his commentary on Psalm clvii. 2, remarks that in his copy the Keri was תַּחְתִּי, under him, and the Kethiv תַּחְתִּי, under me, and I carefully looked for it, but could not find it in the Massorah magna numbered among the eighteen words in which the ך is omitted at the end of the word.⁴⁵ And this, again, is the language of Rabbi Saadia Gaon on Daniel xi. 15, "The Kethiv is מִבְּחֵרָיו, of his choice, and the Keri מִבְּצָרָיו, of his fortresses."⁴⁷ Now, I carefully examined the Massoretic books in all the places where the letters are changed, but could not find it; and my difficulty is [to understand] how these Gaonim could overlook the Massorah, for, according to the Massorah which we have, their statements are incorrect. However, they [Saadia and Rashi] are much wiser than we, who are as it were blind men in a window compared with them.

For some time I was in great perplexity, seeing that the Talmud generally ignores the Massorah, as we have shewn above in the instance Egypt, A. D. 892, and died in 942. It is somewhat strange that Jacob ben Chajim should name him after Rashi, who lived so much later. The title Gaon, which denotes excellency, was given to those who were the spiritual heads of the Jewish community.

⁴⁵ The eighteen words, which according to the Massorah want the suffix Vav in the text, are as follows:—

וְיִשְׁחָדוּ . . . Gen. xxvii. 29	וְיִשְׁחָדוּ . . . 1 Kings ix. 9	וְחִלְלָה . . . Ezek. vii. 21
וְיִשְׁחָדוּ . . . Gen. xliii. 28	וְיִדְבֵּר . . . 1 Kings xii. 7	שׁוֹי . . . Dan. v. 21-
וְיִצֹו . . . Judg. xxi. 20	יִקַּח . . . 2 Kings xx. 18	וְיַעַל . . . Ezra iii. 2
וְיַעֲלֶה . . . 1 Sam. vii. 9	וְיִתְּנָה . . . 2 Kings xxii. 5	אֲחִירִי . . . Nehem. iii. 30
וְיֹאמְרוּ . . . 1 Sam. xii. 10	וְיֹאכֵל . . . Isaiah xxxvii. 30	אֲחִירִי . . . Nehem. iii. 31
וְאָמַר . . . 1 Sam. xiii. 19	וְיִדַּד . . . Jerem. xlviii. 7	וְקָבַל . . . Esther ix. 27

These instances are enumerated in the Massorah marginalis, on 1 Kings i. 1; in the Massorah finalis under letter Vav, p. 27 a, col. 4—27 b, col. 1; Ochla Ve-Ochla, section cxix., and Tractate Sopherim vii. 1. It is, however, to be remarked, that Sopherim only gives thirteen instances, וְיִשְׁחָדוּ (Gen. xliii. 28); וְיִצֹו (Judges xxi. 20); and אֲחִירִי (Nehem. iii. 30), being omitted. Comp. also Frensdorff's note on section cxix., Ochla Ve-Ochla, p. 32, and Levita's Massoreth Ha-Massoreth, p. 117, note 69, ed. Ginsburg.

⁴⁷ It is now established beyond doubt, that the commentary on Daniel which Jacob b. Chajim Ibn Adonijah published in the Rabbinic Bible, under the name of Saadia, and which he here quotes is spurious. Comp. the article SAADIA, in Kitto's Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature.

of plene and defective. According to whom [I asked myself] are we then to write the scrolls of the law, since what is lawful according to the one is unlawful according to the other? At the first thought it would seem that we ought to write our scrolls according to the Talmud in the case of plene and defective, since we have taken it upon ourselves [to follow its authority], and since they [i. e., the authors of the Talmud] were better versed in the Massorah, as well as in plene and defective, than we are. Nevertheless, we find that Rashi, of blessed memory, draws objections from the Massorah against our Talmud, as in the case of the sons of Eli [1 Sam. ii. 24], and even declares that the statement in the Talmud that the Kethiv מַעֲבְרִים is a mistake, as we have shewn above.⁴⁸ The authors of the Tassafoth, too, raise objections from the Massorah against the Talmud, and make the Massorah their basis, as will be seen in the sequel from a quotation in Tract Jebamoth [106 b] Now if the Massorah were not their basis, they would not have argued from it against the Talmud. But since we see that though they were later than the Talmudists, and yet made the Massorah their basis to argue from it against the Talmud, it is evident that we too must act according to the Massorah. And, indeed, this is the reason why the Codices and the corrections of the scrolls are all according to the Massorah; and of a truth the men of the Great Synagogue [i. e., the authors of the Massorah] are of great authority, and fully worthy that we should rely upon them. And though Rashi, of blessed memory, as we have seen, sides with Rabbi Meier in the Talmud, in the case of מַזְוִיּוֹת, against the Massorah, taking the Kethiv to be מַזְוִיּוֹת, as we have stated above,⁴⁹ and in many other cases, yet we also see that in other places he argues from the Massorah against the Talmud, as I have shewn in this section.

As to the heretics, there is no foundation in the charge which they prefer against us, that we have wilfully altered and changed the text of the Scriptures, which they derive from the removal of Var by דברדינא לעיל במלא חסר, אליבא דמאן נכתוב ספר תורה, דחא מה שכתב לוח פסול לה; לפום דיהמא נראה למימר דכחלמורא דילן נכתוב ספר תורה במלא חסר, מאחר דקבלננהו עלינו, ואינון חוו בקיאי במסרה ובמלא חסר יתיר מינן; ומיהו חוין לרש"י וזכרנו לברכה דחא הוא מקשה מהמסרה לחלמורא דילן, נבי בני עלי, ואמר דמעות הוא מה דאמר בנמרא מעבדים כתיב כרתיבנא לעיל;⁴⁸ וגם בעלי התוספות מקשין מהמסרה לחלמורא דילן, ועבדי עיקר מהמסרה, וכדלקמן ביבמות סוף פרק מצות חליצת אמה אביי כולי, ואם המסרה לא הוה עיקר לא הוו מקשים מינה לחלמורא, ומדקא חוין דאינון בתרא, וחוו עבדי עיקר מהמסרה לאקשווי מינה לחלמורא, משמע דאליבא דמסרה קא עבדינו, ותו דכולהו ספרי, וחוקן ספר תורה, כולחו אליבא דמסרה, ואנשי כנסת הגדולה גדולים הוו, ואיבא למיסמך עליהון; ואף על גב דקא חוין דרש"י וזכרנו לברכה, נבי מווח דפרשת ואחתנן, כביא ליה כרבי מאיר מווח כתיב, כדריבנא לעיל,⁴⁹ וכך בכמה דוכתי, הא חוין דברוכתא אחריית מקשה מהמסרה לחלמורא, כנוכח לעיל:

ולא קשה מידי מה דמקשים המינים, דאנן שנין וחלפינן בתורה, מדקא חוו עמר

⁴⁸ Vide supra, p. 57, &c.

⁴⁹ Vide supra, p. 59, &c.

the Scribes, the alterations of the Scribes, Keri and Kethiv, &c.,⁵⁰ because by Itur Sopherim is not meant that they [i. e., the Scribes] have removed the ו, but as it is explained in the Aruch under עמור; where it is remarked Itur Sopherim denotes removal, as the Chaldees renders סגר, to remove [1 Kings xxii. 44], by עטר; and so we find in Gittin, 86, the nature of the bill of divorce is "absolved and (ועטר), discharged." Now it appears that the villagers were at first not particular in reading the Scriptures, and read אחר, AND afterward [Gen. xviii. 5, Ps. lxxviii. 26]; וְאַחֲרָיו, AND thy judgments [Ps. xxxvi. 7]: they committed a blunder at that time [by inserting Vav conjunctive in these passages], thinking that these were the correct readings because they seemed to be so. Whereupon the Sopherim came and removed the Vav, and the reading became again, as it originally was, אחר, afterwards, וְאַחֲרָיו, thy judgments; and when it was seen that the Sopherim had removed the Vav, the words thus corrected were denominated Itur Sopherim. Rabbi Isaac, therefore, came and propounded that they [i. e., these restored readings] are those received by Moses on Sinai [i. e., are the original readings]. And even up to the generations nearer that time they blundered and read וְאֵל, and not, with Vav [Exod. xxiii. 13], when the Sopherim decreed that it should be read without a Vav." Thus far his argument.

Thus it is evident that they [i. e., the Sopherim] made no wilful changes. But if they [i. e., the heretics] will persist in it in spite of what the Gaon [i. e., the author of the Aruch], of blessed memory says, we can repel them with the power of argument as follows. Can any man believe that if one intends to make wilful alterations and changes he would say, See what wilful changes I have made, especially in the Prophets? Yet we find the Massorah declares "In five passages the Vav has been removed by the Scribes," &c. Again "eighteen words are emendations of the Scribes," &c.⁵¹ Now if they had intended to make wilful changes, ⁵¹ The eighteen Tikum Sopherim (תיקון סופרים) = Emendations of the Scribes, refer to eighteen alterations which the Scribes decreed should be introduced into the text, in order to remove anthropomorphisms and other indelicate expressions. These eighteen emendations (תיקון מלין) are as follows according to the order of the Hebrew Bible:—i. Gen. xviii. 22, where, for the original reading ויהיה עומד לפני אברהם, and Jehovah still stood before Abraham, is now substituted by the decree of the Scribes = Tikum Sopherim, וַיֵּרָא אֲבְרָהָם עֹמֵד לִפְנֵי יְהוָה, and Abraham still stood before Jehovah, because it appeared offensive to say that the Deity stood before Abraham. ii. Numb. xi. 15, where Moses addresses God, "Kill me, I pray thee . . . that I may not see thy evil," i. e., the punishment wherewith thou visitest Israel, is altered into "that I may not see my evil," because it might seem as if evil were ascribed to the Deity. iii. and iv. Numb. xii. 12, where the original reading, "let her not be as one dead, who proceeded from the womb of our mother, and half of our flesh be consumed," is altered into "let her not be as one dead born, which when it proceeds from the womb of its mother has half of its flesh consumed;" here are two Sopheric emendations. v. 1 Sam. iii. 13, where the original "for his sons cursed God" (as the Sept. still has it Θεοῦ), is altered into "for his sons cursed themselves," because it was too offensive to say that the sons of Eli cursed God, and that Eli knew it and did not reprimand them for it. vi. 2 Sam. xvi. 12, where "will God see with his eye," is altered into "will God look at my affliction," because it was too anthropomorphic. vii. 1 Kings xii. 16, where "To his God O Israel . . . and Israel went to their God," is altered into "To your tents O Israel . . . and Israel departed to their tents," because the separation of Israel from the house of David was regarded as a necessary transition to idolatry; it was looked upon as leaving God and the sanctuary for the worship of idolatry in tents. viii. 2 Chron. x. 16, where the parallel passage is similarly altered, for the same reason. ix. Jer. ii. 11, where "my people have changed my glory for an idol," is altered into "have changed their glory into an idol," because it was too offensive to say such a thing. x. Ezek. viii. 17, where "they have put the rod to my nose," is altered into "they have put the rod to their nose," because of its offensiveness, and to avoid too gross an anthropomorphism. xi. Hos. iv. 7, where "they have changed my glory into shame," is altered into "I will change their glory into shame," for the same reason which dictated the ninth alteration. xii. Hab. i. 12, where the address of the prophet to God, "Thou diest not" (חַיָּוִת), is altered into "we shall not die" (נִשְׁחַתּוּ), because it was deemed improper. xiii. Zech. ii. 12, where "the apple of mine eye," is altered into "the apple of his eye," for the reason which called forth the tenth emendation. xiv. Mal. i. 13, where "ye make me expire," is altered into "ye weary me," because of its being too gross an anthropomorphism. xv. Ps. cvi. 20, where "they have changed my glory into the similitude of an ox," is altered into "they have changed their glory into the similitude of an ox," as in Jer. ii. 11 and Hos. iv. 7. xvi. Job. vii. 20, where Job's address to God, "am I a they would surely not have proclaimed what they have changed, and said, "Eighteen words are Tikun Sopherim, as given in the Mechilta" [on Exod. xv. 7].⁵² Moreover, the Sopherim made no changes nor corrections, they only submitted that the text ought originally to have been so and so, but is veiled in other expressions, out of respect to the Shechina, as you will find out by examining the subject. The same is the case with the Keri and the Kethiv; they [i. e., the Sopherim] point out what they have altered, if peradventure you choose to characterise them as alterations; we of the class of believers, however, believe that they all are a law of Moses from Sinai [i. e., the original readings], including the emendations of the Scribes. But even if you still insist that the Sopherim did make alterations, the alterations in question neither raise nor lower the points upon which the heretics rest. Consult, also, the work done for Ptolemy the king, and you will see that in the thirteen instances where they made changes, they state the reason why they have made these alterations, and what these alterations are in what they did for him.⁵³ In conclusion, the heretics can have nothing to say in this matter:

⁵⁰ The heretics or Christians to whom Jacob b. Chajim refers, have taken their inspiration from Raymond Martin, the celebrated Spanish Dominican, who was born about 1220, and died about 1287. It was this distinguished orientalist, the oracle of the church on Rabbinical lore during the middle ages, who boldly declared that these variations in question were wilful corruptions and perversions introduced by the Jews into the sacred text. Comp. Levita's Massoreth Ha-Massoreth, p. 45, &c., ed. Ginsburg.

לומר, י"ח מלין חיקון סופרים כדנרסין במכילתא;⁵² ועוד דלא שינו חס ושלום הסופרים ולא חקנו, אלא שכן היה לו לומר אלא מפני שכנה הכתוב מפני כבוד השכינה ודוק ותשכח; וכן בקרי וכתב הא מראים מה דשינו, אם חמצא לומר דחס ושלום שינו, אבל אנו כח חמאמינים נאמין דכולהון הלכה למשה מסיני, וכן בחיקון סופרים, אפילו אם חמצא לומר שחקנו הסופרים, לא מעלה ולא מוריד במה שהמינים פוקרים, וראה נם ראה בעובדא דחלמי המלך בשלשה עשר דבר ששינו, שבפירש נאמר למח שינו, ומה שינו בכח שכחבו לו,⁵³ סוף דבר בזה אין להם פה להשיב:

burden (עֹל) TO THEM," is altered into "so that I am a burden (אֵל) TO MYSELF," to remove its offensiveness. xvii. Job xxxii. 3, where the original, "they condemned (אָם אֱלֹהִים, or אָם דִּין) God or THE DIVINE JUSTICE," is altered into "they condemned (אָם אֱלֹהִים) Job," for the same reason as the foregoing. And xviii. Lam. iii. 19, where the inspired writer calls on God to remember his sufferings, and then expresses his conviction, "yea thou wilt remember, and THY SOUL WILL MOURN OVER ME (וְתָשִׁיב עָלַי), this is altered into "and my soul is humbled within me (וְתִשְׁחַד עָלַי נַפְשִׁי), because of the remark that God will mourn. These eighteen Decrees of the Scribes are enumerated in the Massorah magna on Numb. i. 1, and on Ps. cvi. 20, and in the Massoretic work Ochla Ve-Ochlah, p. 113. The whole question of the Tikun Sopherim is most elaborately discussed by Pinsker, in the Hebrew Annual called Kerem Chemed, vol. ix., pp. 52, etc., Berlin, 1856, and Geiger Urschrift und Uebersetzungen der Bibel, p. 308, etc., Breslau, 1857.

⁵² The Mechilta כְּמִלְתָּה is a Midrashic exposition of Exodus xii.—xxxv. 3, attributed to R. Ishmael ben Elisha, who flourished in the first century of the Christian era. For a description of the Mechilta, as well as for R. Ishmael b. Elisha's rules of interpretation and influence on Biblical exegesis, see Alexander's edition of Kitto's Cyclopædia, s. v. ISHMAEL BEN ELISHA, and MIDRASH. The passage referred to, is to be found in Exod. xv. 7, section vi., p. 47, &c., ed. Weiss, Vienna, 1865.

⁵³ The work for King Ptolemy, referred to in the text, is the Septuagint, in which the translators, according to ancient tradition, designedly made thirteen alterations, in order

אלחים וכולי, ודרשינן בנדרים פרק אין בין המדר וכולי עין לעיל,⁵⁴ היינו חולכים כסומים וכסומים כסגורים, ולא היה נמצא לנו ספר שיחיה מונה ולא ספר תורה שנוכל לחסמך עליו; דמיון זה אם מלה אחת היא בוי"ו או בלא וי"ו, כגון ולא בוי"ו או לא בלא וי"ו, לא חוינן ירעין לאוכחי כמאן, אלוילי המכרה, כחא דכתבו התוספות ביבמות סוף פרק מצות חליצה, נבי אמר אביי האי מאן דמקרי נם חליצה לא ליקרי לרירה לא לחוריה, ואבה יבמי לחוריה, דמשמע אבה יבמי כולי. עד רב אשי אשכחיה לרב כהנא דקמצמער ומקרי לה, ולא אבה יבמי אמר

[87 b],⁵⁴ as quoted above, we should have walked about as blind men, and as those who are smitten with blindness, and could not have found any correct Codex, nor any scroll of the Law on which we could rely. Thus we could not have known whether a word has the ו conjunctive or not but for the Massorah, as Tossafoth remarks on this subject in connection with the Levirate law (Jebamoth, 106 b), where "Rabbi Abaja says the one who sends a letter of divorce must not pause after the לא, not, and thus read לאִיָּהּ יִבְמִי, he wants to perform the duty of levir [Deut. xv. 7], since this might convey the idea that he wants to marry her, &c. Now R. Ashai found R. Kahana, who, being perplexed about it, read וְלֹא אִיָּהּ יִבְמִי with ו conjunctive; where the former said to him, Have you not heard what Rabe said upon לְהִיטָחוּת = חסד, a desirable thing, by changing Resh into Daleth, in order not to mention the ass as already stated. xii. Deut. iv. 19, where the sun, moon, and the stars, are said to have been apportioned to the nation as objects of worship, the word לְהִיטָחוּת = διασκοπεῖν, to shine, has been inserted, so as to avoid the idolatry of the heathen being ascribed to God. xiii. Deut. xvii. 3, where we have the statement that God had not commanded the Israelites to worship other Gods, in accordance with Deut. iv. 19; it has been altered לְהִיטָחוּת לְבָרִים, אשר לא צויתי לאומות לְבָרִים, which I have forbidden the nations to worship, to preclude the possibility of ascribing the origin of idolatry to the God of Israel.

It only remains to be added, that these alterations are also enumerated in the Mechilta, on Exod. xii. 40, p. 19, &c., ed. Weiss, Vienna, 1865; and in the Babylonian Talmud, Megilla 9 a, where, however, the following variations occur. i. The Mechilta, which contains the original account, says nothing about these alterations being restricted to thirteen. ii. It erroneously makes alteration ii. to consist in וְנִקְרְבִי, and not in בָּרָא. iii. It restricts alteration vii. to אֶבְרָם only; and iv. It does not give the reason for alteration x., which is given in the Jerusalem Talmud. The variations in the Babylonian Talmud again, are as follows: i. It gives fifteen instead of thirteen alterations, adding the substitution of וְאֶשְׁרֵי = ὁ ἀστυρ, for נְעִי, Exod. xxiv. 5, and for אֶצִּיל, ibid. xxiv. 11. The substitution of this Greek word in both these passages, shows that I was wrong in my strictures on Jacob b. Chajim's quotation (vide supra, p. 53, note 31). ii. It rightly gives בָּרָא, as alteration iii., Gen. i. 2 (v. 2). iii. It states that these alterations were made in the Pentateuch, and by seventy-two elders, which is not mentioned in the other records. Of these thirteen alterations so minutely described in these documents, there are only eight to be found in the present recensions of the Septuagint, viz., Gen. i. 1, ii. 2, xviii. 12, xlix. 6; Exod. iv. 20, xii. 40; Levit. xi. 16 (Deut. xiv. 7); Numb. xvi. 15. Comp. Frankel, Vorstudien zu der Septuaginta, p. 25, &c.; Geiger, Urschrift und Uebersetzungen der Bibel, p. 489, &c., Breslau, 1857; Weiss, Commentary on the Mechilta, p. 19, &c., Vienna, 1865.

⁵⁴ Vide supra, p. 48, &c.

this subject? R. Kahana answered him, In this case Rabe himself yields."⁵⁵ Thus far.

Tossafoth remarks thereupon, and this is its language, "In the correct Codices it is לֹא without the Vav, and this is also evident from the Massorah [which says], 'לֹא occurs three times, in conjunction with אֶבֶר, viz., Deut. x. 10, xxv. 7, and Ps. lxxxi. 12; and in two other passages it commences the verse, and is with Vav conjunctive, viz., Deut. xi. 80. and xxiii. 6.' It also occurs in two other passages of the same kind, not mentioned in the Massorah, viz., 1 Sam. xxxi. 4, and Judges xi. 17." Thus far the language of Tossafoth. You can see now that if it had not been for the Massorah we should not have known whether to read לֹא, not, or לְאִי, and not [in Deut. xxv. 7]. But finding in the Massorah that לֹא occurs three times, and that the passage in question is counted among them, it is evident that the reading was not לְאִי, and not, with Vav. Indeed innumerable examples might be adduced which are like it. Again, when the Massorah enumerates a certain word which is in so many instances preceded by לֹא, but in none of them by לְאִי, saying that this construction occurs so many times, we know positively that in all other places it is לְאִי. Thus, for instance, it tells us that in fourteen verses occur לֹא, לֹא, and לְאִי, and vice versa; and so all the rest. The same is also the case with אֶבֶר and אֶבֶר, in Numb. xxxi. 22, upon which the Massorites remark: "And the sign is, the gold belongs to the king," and the meaning is, that this passage ought to be so, for there are two passages which take this ו before the second and the last nouns, whilst the remaining ones have no copulative, viz., the passages before us, and Joshua ix. 1. Now the meaning of this [Massoretic sign] is that the gold, which indicates the passage beginning with but the gold [Numb. xxxi. 22], is similar in construction, and belongs to the king, which indicates לֹא לא סבר לֹא מר להא דרבא, אמר לֹא מודה רבא בלא אבה יבמי,⁵⁶ עד כאן:

וכתבו החוספת וזה לשונם, לֹא אבה כתוב בספרים מרזיקים, וכן מוכח במסרה לֹא אבה נ' רסמיכי, לא אבה י' השחיתך, לא אבה יבמי, וישראל לא אבה לי, ויש שנים ריש פרשה במשנה תורה ולא אבה סיהון, ולא אבה י' לשמוע אל בלעם, ויש פסוק דלא שייכי לאותו מכורת ולא אבה נושא כליו דשאול, ונס אל מלך מואב שלח ולא אבה דיפתח, עד כאן לשון החוספת; הנך רואה בענין שאלולי המסורה היינו מסופקים אי הוה קרינן לא אבה או ולא אבה, ומרזאחינן דבמסורה אמר דאינון נ' לא אבה, ומני דין חד מנהון, ידעינן בבירור דלא קרינן ולא אבה, ודכוותיה טובא לאין מספר; ותו במסרה מני לא ופלה אחרא וליה חד מנהון ולא, ואמר אינון כך וכך, בבירור ידעינן דשארא כתבין וקריין ולא, וכן המשל ארבע עשרה פסוקים איח בהון לא לא ולא או ההפך וכן כולם, וכן את את ואת ואת, כהא דאמרין אך את חוזה ואת חכפא את הנחשת את הברזל את הברזל ואת העופרת, כתב עליו בעל המסורה וסימניך דהבא למלכיא, ופירש כי כך דינו, ואינון שני פסוקים דנסבין הלין ווי"ן תנינא ואת ובתרא ואת ושארא את דין ופסוק ויהי כשמוע' כל המלכים ריהושע החתי והאמורי הכנעני חפריזי החוי והיבוס, ⁵⁵ The allusion to Rabe arises from the circumstance that he laid no weight on a pause. Compare Jebamoth, 106, b.

the passage, "and it came to pass, when all the kings heard" [where-with the verse in Joshua ix. 1 begins]. From this you can see the beautiful and laconic style of the Massorites, for thereby they make known to us how the passage is to be read and written. If it had not been for the Massorites, how could we tell, when we find it written, the Hittites, AND the Amorites, AND the Canaanites, AND the Perizzites, whether the order is right or wrong?⁵⁶ The same is the case with plene and defective, since with us the Keri and Kethiv are of paramount importance, although there is a dispute as to which of them should be made the basis [in expounding the text]; e. g., in Pessachim, 16 b, where the question is about the word יאכל

⁵⁶ To understand the remark in the text, it is necessary to add to what we have already said upon this subject (vide supra, p. 30, &c.), that Ibn Adonijah alludes to those six verses out of the twenty, containing the names of the Canaanitish nations, which are divisible into two groups, of three verses each ('ב' ורג' כן ג'), and which with the other fourteen form one rubric. They are as follows:—

Exod. iii. 8	הכנעני והחתי והאמורי והפריזי והחוי ודיבוס
Exod. iii. 17	הכנעני החתי והאמורי והפריזי והחוי ודיבוס
Judges iii. 5	הכנעני החתי והאמורי והפריזי והחוי ודיבוס
Deut. xx. 17	החתי והאמורי והכנעני והפריזי והחוי ודיבוס
Joshua ix. 1	החתי והאמורי והכנעני והפריזי והחוי ודיבוס
Joshua xii. 8	החתי האמורי והכנעני הפריזי החוי ודיבוס

These are the only six instances out of the twenty passages which follow in definite order; of the other fourteen, there are not only some which do not give all the names, but each has an arbitrary sequence in the enumeration. They are as follows:—

Exod. xiii. 5	הכנעני החתי והאמורי והחוי ודיבוס
Exod. xxiii. 28	האמורי החתי והפריזי והכנעני החוי ודיבוס
Exod. xxiii. 28	את החוי את הכנעני ואת החתי
Exod. xxxiii. 2	את הכנעני האמורי והחתי והפריזי החוי ודיבוס
Exod. xxxiv. 11	את האמורי והכנעני והחתי והפריזי החוי ודיבוס
Numb. xiii. 29	החתי ודיבוס האמורי . . . והכנעני
Deut. vii. 1	החוי והגרגשי והאמורי והכנעני והפריזי והחוי ודיבוס
Josh. iii. 10	את הכנעני ואת החתי ואת החוי ואת הגרגשי והאמורי ודיבוס
Josh. xi. 3	הכנעני האמורי והחתי והפריזי ודיבוס החוי
Josh. xiv. 11	האמורי הפריזי והכנעני החתי והגרגשי החוי ודיבוס
1 Kings ix. 20	האמורי החתי הפריזי החוי ודיבוס
Ezra ix. 1	לכנעני החוי הפריזי ודיבוס האמורי
Nehem. ix. 8	הכנעני החתי האמורי והפריזי ודיבוס והגרגשי
2 Chron. viii. 7	החתי האמורי הפריזי החוי ודיבוס

It will be seen that even in those instances where the order is the same, the use of the Vav conjunctive is so arbitrary, that were it not for the Massorah, which most minutely marks both its presence and absence; it would be very difficult to ascertain the correct orthography.

[Exod. xii. 46];⁵⁷ and the similar case in connection with the feast of tabernacles, where we have בִּסְכַּת בִּסְכַּת [Succa, 6 b];⁵⁸ and many other examples might be adduced on this subject (vide Tossafoth on Succa). This also obtains by the marginal readings which are not in the text, the Kametz and Pattach, and other things of a similar kind, which alter the sense, and of which there are numerous examples. Again, also, in the point of the numbers of passages which the Massorah gives, saying, "There are three or four more," &c.; from all this we learn many different laws and explanations. Thus, for instance, when it is said in the Massorah on the word בְּרֵאשִׁית, in the beginning, that it begins the verse three times, viz., Gen. i. 1; Jerem. xxvi. 1, xxviii. 1; it throws light upon what is said in the Talmud, where it is declared "God wanted to reduce the world again to void and emptiness, because of the wicked Jehojakim, but when He looked upon the people of his ⁵⁷ As the Kethiv is יֹאכֵל passive, and the Keri יֹאכֵל active, two inferences are deduced therefrom in the Talmud. R. Jehudah maintains that the man who partakes of the passover, הוא must eat it (יֹאכֵל) in one place (בבית אחד), but that the passover itself may be divided, and a part of it may be eaten by another company in another place; basing his argument upon the Keri יֹאכֵל he must eat it at one place. Whereas R. Simeon maintains that the passover itself הוא must be eaten (יֹאכֵל) in one place (בבית אחד), and cannot be divided between two different companies in different places, though the man himself, after having eaten his passover at home, may go to another place and partake of another company's passover; basing his argument upon the Kethiv יֹאכֵל it must be eaten in one place.

⁵⁸ The word בסדר occurs three times in the Pentateuch (twice in Lev. xxiii. 42, and once in ver. 43); in two cases (Lev. xxiii. 42) it is defective, i. e., without the ו, and in the third instance it is plene, i. e., with the ו. Now, upon the saying of the Rabbins that a tabernacle must have two whole walls, and the third may be a partial one, to be a legal tabernacle, R. Simeon remarks that it must have three entire walls, and that the fourth may be a partial one, to constitute it a tabernacle according to the law. This difference of opinion the Talmud explains by saying that the sages follow the spelling בסדר בסדר בסדר, which makes four (since two are in the singular and one in the plural); one of these four represents the commandment itself, shewing that we must have a סדר, and the remaining three indicate the three walls, one of which is allowed by the Halacha to be partial. Whereas R. Simeon follows the pronunciation, which is alike plural in all the three instances, and hence obtains six. He then takes one of these three (i. e., of the plurals) to indicate the commandment respecting the feast itself, and the remaining two plurals, being four in number, he refers to the four walls of the סדר, one of which may, according to the Halacha, be partial.

time, His mind was appeased : God again wanted to reduce the world to void and emptiness, because of the people of Zedekiah's time, but when He looked upon Zedekiah, His mind was appeased" [Erachin, 17 a].⁵⁹ Again we read in the Massorah, "וַיִּבְדֵּל", and he separated, occurs three times, viz., Gen. i. 4, 7; '1 Chron. xxv. 1.'⁶⁰ Now it is said in the Talmud, "Whoso [in the Havdalah]⁶¹ mentions the separations [of God] must not mention less than three, nor more than seven. [Query.] To say not more than seven is right, because seven separations are instanced, and there are no more; but why should there be not less than three? [Reply]. Because וַיִּבְדֵּל occurs three times; and as the first separation was between the Sabbath and the week days, therefore must the three separations be mentioned at the close of the Sabbath, viz., "between holy and profane," "between light and darkness," and "between Israel and the Gentiles;"⁶² the fourth separation which is mentioned on this occasion, viz., "between the seventh day and

בדורו נתישבה דעתו, בקש הקב"ה לחזור את העולם לתוהו וכוהו מבני דורו של זדקיהו, כיון שנסחבל בצדקתו נרשיבה דעתו, עד כאן;⁵⁹ וחו נרסינן במסורת ויבדל ג', ויבדל אלהים בין האור, ויבדל בין המים, ויבדל דוד ושרי הצבא בדברי הימים כ"ה,⁶⁰ כדאמר בערכי פסחים כל הפותח לא יפתח משלשה הברכות, ולא יוסיף על שבע, בשלמה אין מוסיפין על שבע, דהתם קא חשיב שבע הברכות ולא אשכחן פס', אלא שלשה אמאי, משום דשלש פעמים כריב ויבדל, והבדלה ראשונה היתה במוצאי שבת, למיכך עושים שלשה הברכות במוצאי שבת, בין קדש לחול, בין אור לחשך בין ישראל לגוים,⁶¹ ובין יום השביעי לששה ימי

⁵⁹ The Massoretic enumeration of these three passages suggests an explanation of the passage in the Talmud, where Jer. xxvi. 1 and xxviii. 1, are connected with Gen. i. 1, shewing that God wished, in those cases where בראשית is used, to destroy the work of the first בראשית. May not this striking illustration also suggest the design of the Massorah in its first origin?

⁶⁰ The editio princeps differs from the succeeding editions in the quotations. Thus, for instance, the first, second, and third editions of Jacob. b. Chajim's Bible indicate the reference to Genesis i. 7, by quoting simply ריבול בן המים, whereas the later editions add אשר מחזיר לקדש; whilst the third reference in the editio princeps is to ריבול אהרן קדש קדשים, which does not occur in the Hebrew Scriptures, and has therefore rightly been altered in the second, third, and the other editions into ריבול דוד ושרי הצבא ב"ה כ"ה.

⁶¹ Havdalah הברכה is the name of the prayer which the Jews to this day offer on Sabbath evening, at the going out of the Sabbath and coming in of the week day. The last benediction in this prayer, in which occur the passages referred to in the Talmud, is as follows: ברוך אתה "אלהינו מלך העולם המבדיל בין קדש לחול בין אור לחשך בין ישראל לגוים" Blessed be the Lord our God, king of the universe, who hast made a distinction between the holy and the common, between light and darkness, between Israel and the other nations, between the seventh day and the other six days of work; blessed be thou, O God, who hast made a distinction between the holy and the common!

⁶² This is the reading of the editio princeps, as well as of the second and third editions, of the Rabbinic Bibles; later editions have substituted לעמים לגוים, because of the fear of Christians, who took it to refer to themselves.

the six days of creation," is included in "between holy and profane," and is simply repeated in order to make it agree in sense with the concluding benediction⁶³ [Pessachim, 103 b, 104 a]. Again we read in the Massorah, "פָּתַח, opened, occurs four times, and the passages are Numb. xix. 15, Job xxix. 19, Psalm v. 10, and Jerem. v. 16;" and these four correspond to the four laws which obtain with regard to an earthen vessel, viz., when it has a hole through which the water runs into it, the law is that it must not be used for consecrating therein the water of sin-offering, thus answering to "and every open vessel" [Numb. xix. 15]; yet it is still a vessel with respect to the growing of plants. But if the hole is so large that a small root can be put through it, then it is clean for growing therein plants, for when a plant grows in a vessel which has a hole, it is no longer subject to defilement, thus answering to "my root is opened" [Job xxix. 19]; yet it is still a vessel with respect to olives. If the hole, however, is so large that an olive can pass through it, then it is clean [or not subject to defilement], thus answering to "an open sepulchre is their throat" [Ps. v. 10], for what amounts to eating is the size of an olive; yet it is still a vessel with respect to pomegranates. But if the hole is so large that a pomegranate can pass through it, then it is no longer subject to any defilement, and thus answers to "his heap is as an open sepulchre" [Jerem. v. 16]; that is to say, when the vessel has a hole through which a pomegranate can pass, it is like a heap of rubbish, for it is no longer regarded as a vessel.⁶⁴ Many of the Massoretic signs are used for such explanations in innumerable cases; some of them are dispersed through the book Mordecai,⁶⁵ and in the המעשה, בכלל בין קרש לחול, ואומרים אותו כדי לסמוך לחתימה מעין חתימה⁶³ וחו גרמין במסורת פתוח ד', וסימנו וכל כלי פתוח, שרשי פתוח אלי מים, קבר פתוח גרונם, אשפתו כקבר פתוח, ואינון כנגד ארבע מרות שחם בכלי חרס, נקב בכונס משקה, נפסל מלקדש בו מי המאט, היינו וכל כלי פתוח וגומר, ועדיין כלי הוא לזרעים, נקב בשורש קמן, מהור הוא לזרעים, אם היה בעצין נקוב אינו מקבל מומאח, היינו שרשי פתוח דאיוב, ועדיין כלי הוא לקבל בו ויחים, נקב במוציא וית, מחור העשי לאוכלין, היינו קבר פתוח גרונם רחלים, דמחם אכילה כזית, ועדיין כלי הוא לרמונים, נקב במוציא רמון, מהור הוא לנמר, והיינו אשפתו פתוח, כלומר כשהכלי במוציא רמון, נרמה לאשפה רשוב אין תורת כלי עליו;⁶⁴ והדבה מסימנים אלו נדרשים ככהאי גוונא לאין מספר, ומהם מפורים במדרכי⁶⁵, וברשובר

⁶³ פתוח is the reading of the first, second, and third editions of the Rabbinic Bibles, in accordance with the Talmud (Pessachim, 103 a), whence it is quoted. Later editions have erroneously פתח.

⁶⁴ Things in a vessel are, according to the Talmud, subject to defilement. If the vessel, however, happens to have a hole, then it all depends upon the size of this hole, the definition of which is the subject of discussion. Compare Maimonides, Iad Ha-Chesaka, Hilchoth Kelim, section xiv., vol. iii., p. 350; ed. Amsterdam, 1702.

⁶⁵ ספר המדרכי, Mordecai, also called המדרכי, the Book of Mordecai, is a treatise on the Legal Code (ספר הדין), embodying all the laws of the Talmud, which was compiled, revised, corrected, annotated, and supplemented by Isaac Alphasi. This Sepher

Theological Decisions of Maharam,⁶⁶ where the latter defines what is meant by the word הִכְנִיחַ, he smote me, which the Massorah says occurs twice, viz., Song of Songs v. 7, Proverbs xxiii. 35 (by a comparison of these two passages), vide in loco. In fact, there can be no doubt that whenever the Massorites state an expression occurs 7 or 4 or 10 or 8 times, they are designed for some great purpose, and are not useless. All this shews the great sanctity of our holy law, and that the parallels are marked with a design. Moreover, when the Massorah makes the remark in Chaldee, there is a reason for it, which will be found upon examination. For this reason I have collected all that I could find of their remarks in the Massoretic books which I possess, collated it, and put it in these twenty-four sacred books, arranging everything in its proper place, and I have repeated it again in the Massorah finalis, so that it can easily be found. Were I inclined to write more largely upon this subject, and to show the use of all the Massorah, and support it by proofs, it would occupy too much space, and the perusal of it would be a weariness to the flesh.

When I saw the great benefit which is to be derived from the Massorah magna, the Massorah parva, and the Massorah finalis, I apprised Seigneur Daniel Bomberg of it, may his Rock and Redeemer protect him! and shewed him the advantage of the Massorah. Where-Mordecai has been printed with the Sepher Ha-Halachoth, Constantinople, 1509; Venice, 1521-22; Sabionetta, 1524, &c. It has also appeared separately, Venice, 1558; Cracow, 1598, &c. Compare Fürst, Bibliotheca Judaica, ii., 324, &c.; Steinschneider, Catalogus Libr. Hebr. in Bibliotheca Bodleiana, 1659, &c. The work derives its appellation from the author, whose name was Mordecai b. Hillel, and who was martyred at Nürnberg, 1810.

⁶⁶ מַהְרַם, Maharam, is the acrostic of מַאֲרֵי דְרַב מֵאִיר, our teacher the Rabbi Meier. This R. Meier b. Baruch, who was born 1230, and died 1293, was one of the most distinguished Jewish literati during the middle ages, and the first official chief Rabbi in the German empire, to which dignity he was nominated by the Emperor Rodolph I., of Hapsburg. He had his seat and college at Rottenburg-an-der-Tauber, whence he is also called Meier of Rottenburg, or Meier Rottenburg. His Theological Decisions, or Questions and Answers (שְׁאוֹלוֹת וְתַשְׁבּוּבוֹת), have been published at Cremona, 1557; Prague, 1603. He also wrote Commentaries on the Massorah (מִסְרֵי הַמַּסֹּרָה), which are still in MS. in the public libraries. Compare Fürst, Bibliotheca Judaica, iii., 176, &c., Graetz, Geschichte der Juden, vol. vii., p. 183, &c.; Leipzig, 1863.

upon he did all in his power to send into all the countries in order to search what may be found of the Massorah; and, praised be the Lord, we obtained as many of the Massoretic books as could possibly be got. The said gentleman was not backward, and his hand was not closed, nor did he draw back his right hand from producing gold out of his purse to defray the expenses of the books, and of the messengers who were engaged to make search for them in the most remote corners, and in every place where they might possibly be found.

And when I examined these Massoretic books, and mastered their contents, I found them in the utmost disorder and confusion, so much so that there was not a sentence to be found without a blunder, that is to say, the quotations from the Massorites are both incorrect and misplaced; since in those copies [of the Bible] in which the Massorah is written in the margin, it is not arranged according to the order of the verses contained in the page. Thus, for instance, if a page has five or six verses, the first of which begins with וַיֹּאמֶר, and he said, the second with וַיֵּן, and it was told, the third with וַיֹּה, and this, the fourth with וַיִּשְׁלַח, and he sent, the fifth with וַיֵּשֶׁב, and she sat, the Massorah begins with וַיִּשְׁלַח, the fourth verse, "the word וַיִּשְׁלַח occurs twenty-two times;"⁶⁷ then follows verse two, "the word וַיֵּן occurs twenty-four times;"⁶⁸ and מאמצי כחו לשלוח ככל אלו הנלילות, לחפש כל מה שימצא מחסרה, וחללה לאל תתנוללו לדינו מספרי המסרה מה שאיפשר לחתנולל, והשר חוכר לא נחעצל, וידו לא קפץ, וימינו לא השיב אחור, מלהויל וזה מכינו בחוצות קניית הספרים, והשלוחים אשר נשתרלו לחפשם בחורים ובסדקים ובכל מקום שהיו:

ואחר שראיתי בספרי המסרה וחתבונותי בהם, דאיתים מכולבלים בתכלית, ומשובשים עד שאין בהם בית אשר אין שם מה, היינו הפסוקים שהיה מביא בעל המסורה והכלבול הגדול שחיה בהם, כי אותם מספרים שהיה בהם המסרה סביב, לא היתה המסרה כתובה כסדר הפסוקים שהיה בעמוד, דמיון והאמרי חמשה או ששה פסוקים בעמוד, האחר מתחיל ויאמר, וחשני ויגד, והשלישי וזה, והרביעי וישלח, והחמישי וחשב, המסורה היה מתחיל וישלח כ"ט, ואחר כך ויגד כ"ז,⁶⁸ ואחר כך וחשב

⁶⁷ The instances in which וַיִּשְׁלַח is the Piel, future, with Vav conversive, are the following: Gen. viii. 7, 8, 12; xix. 29; xlv. 24: Exod. xviii. 27: Numb. xxii. 40: Josh. xxiv. 28: Judges ii. 6; iii. 18; xv. 5: 1 Sam. x. 25; xi. 7; xxx. 26: 2 Sam. iii. 21; xviii. 2: 2 Kings v. 24; xvii. 25, 26; xxiv. 2: Psalm cvi. 15. In the Massorah marginalis on Gen. viii. 7, where the instances are enumerated, twenty-one only are given, and there are no more to be found in the Bible, though the Massorah, like Ibn Adonijah, states that there are twenty-two, unless we include in this rubric וַיִּשְׁלַח (Exod. vi. 11), with Vav conjunctive. It is moreover to be added, that there is evidently a misprint in the Massorah, where we have וישלח אר הדינה, a second time instead of וישלח אר הדינה (Gen. viii. 12).

⁶⁸ The twenty-four instances in which וַיֵּן, Hophal, future, with Vav conversive, are as follows: Gen. xxii. 20; xxvii. 42; xxxi. 22; xxxviii. 18, 24: Exod. xiv. 5: Josh. x. 17: Judges ix. 25, 47: 1 Sam. xv. 12; xix. 19; xxiii. 7; xxvii. 4: 2 Sam. vi. 12; x. 17: 1 Chron. xix. 17: 2 Sam. xix. 2; xxi. 11: 1 Kings i. 51; ii. 29, 41: 2 Kings vi. 18; viii. 7: Isaiah vii. 2. They are enumerated in the Massorah finalis, under the letter He, p. 22 b, col. 4.

then the fifth verse, "the word לחבין occurs fifteen times,"⁶⁹ without any order or plan. Moreover, most of these [Massoretic remarks] are written in a contracted form and with ornaments, so much so that they cannot at all be deciphered, as the desire of the writer was only to embellish his writing, and not to examine or to understand the sense. Thus, for instance, in most of the copies there are four lines [of the Massorah] on the top of the page, and five at the bottom, as the writer would under no circumstances diminish or increase the number. Hence, whenever there happened to be any of the alphabetical lists,⁷⁰ or if the Massoretic remarks were lengthy, he split them up in the middle, or at the beginning, and largely introduced abbreviations, so as to obtain even lines. Now, when I observed all this confusion, I bestirred myself in the first place to arrange all the Massoretic notes according to the verses to which they belonged, and then to investigate the Massoretic treatises in my possession, apart from what is written in the margin of the Bibles. Whenever an omission or contraction occurred [in those copies of the Bible which had the Massorah] in order to obtain even lines, or four lines [of Massorah] at the top [of a page in the Bible] and five at the bottom, I at once consulted the Massoretic treatises, and corrected it according to order. And whenever I found that the Massoretic treatises differed from each other, I put down the opinions of both sides, as will be found in the margin of our edition of the Bible published by us, with the Massorah,⁷¹ the word in dispute being marked to indicate that it is not the language of the Massorah ; and whenever I took exception to the statement of a certain Codex of the Massorah, because its remark did not harmonise with the majority of the copies of the Massorah, whilst the same difficulty was not found in the others, or whenever it contradicted itself, or where there was a mistake, I made a careful search till I discovered the truth, according to my humble knowledge ; but sometimes I had to leave it in uncertainty, and for this reason there will be found many such in the margin of the Bible which we printed. The Lord alone knows how much labour I bestowed thereon, as those will testify who saw me working at it. As to the revision of the verses, it would have been impossible for me to do it correctly without knowing the whole Scriptures by heart, and this is far from me. But for a certain book called Concordance, the author of which is the learned R. Isaac Nathan,⁷² who lived some forty years ago, published in our printing-office at Venice, I could not have corrected the verses. This is a precious work ; it embraces all the points of the Holy Bible, and explains all the sacred Scriptures, by stating all nouns and verbs with their analogous forms, and giving at the heading of every noun and verb an explanation, saying the meaning of the word is so and so, and branches out in such and such a manner, and comments upon each one separately. It also marks the division of each chapter, and the number of chapters in every prophetic book, and tells in which chapter and verse every word occurs, i. e., verse 4, 20, or 30, thereby any word wanted may easily be found. And if a verse has four or five verbs or nouns, e. g., וּבִצֵּל יְדֵי קִטְיִתִּי, in the shadow of mine hand [Isa. li. 16], you will find it quoted under צֵל, shadow ; under יָד, hand ; and under קִטְיָה, to cover ; so that if you only remember one word in the verse, whether verb or noun, you will easily find the required passage under the root of the verb or noun. The advantage to be derived from this book is indescribable; without it there is no way of examining the references of the Massorah, since one who studies the Massorah must look into the verse which the Massorah quotes, and which without a concordance would take a very long time to find, as you might not know in which prophet the passage referred to occurs, and if you knew the prophet, you might still not know the chapter and verse. Besides, all the world is not so learned in the Scriptures. Whosoever has this concordance does not require any more the lexicon of Kimchi, for it contains all the roots, whereunto is added an index of all the verses in the Bible: none of them is wanted. In conclusion, without it I could not have done the work which I have done.

⁶⁹ The instances in which לחבין occurs, are as follows: Gen. xxi. 16 (twice); xxxi. 34; xxxviii. 11, 14; xlix. 24: Josh. vi. 25: 1 Sam. i. 23: 2 Sam. xiii. 20: 1 Kings ii. 19: Ruth ii. 23, 14. They are enumerated in the Massorah marginalis, on Gen. xxxviii. 11, and on 2 Sam. xiii. 20, where it is distinctly stated that there are only twelve instances; and indeed there are no more to be found in the Hebrew Scriptures. The statement, therefore, in the text, that there are fifteen such instances, which is to be found in all the editions of Jacob b. Chajim's Introduction, must be a slip of the pen.

⁷⁰ By Alphabetical Massorah is meant, a certain number of exceptions, or peculiar forms of words, which come under the same rubric, and are arranged and enumerated in alphabetical order.

⁷¹ Hence the Massorah thus put in the margin obtained the name Massorah marginalis.

במסורת נקוד על הפלוגתא, להיות כי אינו מלשון בעל המסורה ; וכן במקומות שהיה קשה לי על לשון ספר אחד מהמסורה, שלא הייתי מוצא כדבריו ברוב הספרים, ובמסורה אחת באופן אחר ולא היה קשה, ובמקומות שהיה קשה מדריה אדריה, או שהיה מעות, הייתי חוקר עד שהייתי מוצא האמת לעניות דעתי, ובמקומות הנחתי חרבר בספק, וכן כמה מיני קהוון, כאשר ימצא כחוב סביבות עשרים וארבע זה שהדפסנו ; והשם יודע כמה מורה עבדתי על זה, וכבר זה מפורסם לכל מי שראה אותי מתעסק בו : ובהנחה הפסוקים לא היה איפשר שהייתי יכול להגיה אלא אם כן שהייתי יודע כל העשרים וארבע על פה, זה נעלם ממני, ואלולי ספר אחד הנקרא שמו קונקורדנסיא, חבדו חכם אחד קרוב לזמננו זה בכמו ארבעים שנה, שמו רבי יצחק נתן, וזר צדיק לברכה,⁷² שכבר נדפס פה ויניציא בבית דפוסינו, לא היה באפשר שהייתי יכול להגיה, והוא כלי יקר, מקיף כל קמרי המכתב הקדוש, ומבאר כל המכתב הקדוש בחברו כל שם ופועל עם הדומה לו, ובראש כל שם ופועל מפרש התיבה הזאת פירש כך וכך, או תפרד לכך וכך ראשים, ופירשם כך וכך, ובצינו אותם חציונים בחלוקת כל פרשה ופרשה, וכל נביא ונביא, לכך וכך פרשיות, ובכל תיבה רושם זאת המצא במימן פלוני, בפסוק ד', או כ', או ל', שבסבה זה תכף בנקלה ימצא המבוקש ; ואם פסוק אחד יש לו ד', או ח' פעלים ושמות, כגון ובצל ידי כסיתיך, המצא פסוק זה בפרש צל, ובפרש יד, ובפרש כסה, עד שאם אינך

⁷² For R. Isaac Nathan, see Kitto's Cyclopædia, s. v.

Seeing that the Massorah was too large to be printed entire in the margin, I have not repeated the Massoretic remark after it has been given once. Thus, for instance, וישלח, and he sent, occurs twenty-two times: I enumerated the passages in the remark on the words וישלח [Gen. viii. 8], and when I afterwards came again to the word וישלח, in another place, I did not repeat all these references, having given them once before, but simply said the Massoretic remark will be found in section Noah.⁷³ As the prophetic books are large, every prophet having on an average twenty-five chapters, my labour would have been in vain if I had simply said the word is found in such and such a prophet, since the reference could not be found without great exertion, and the student would soon have grown weary and left it off altogether. I have therefore adopted the division of the chapters which R. Isaac Nathan made, and said it occurs in such and such a prophet, מסין או זכר לידע, כי אם חיבה אחת שהיא פועל או שם מהפסוק, חקף המצא מבוקשך בשרש הפועל, או השם החזוי; ונדרולה מעלת ותועלת זה הספר לאין חכלית, וזולתו ובלעדו אין דרך לעיין במסורה למצוא הפסוק שצריך חקף, כי צריך שהמעין יבקש הפסוק שמביא המסורה או זולתו שצריך, יעבור זמן רב כי יבאו פסוקים שלא ידע באיזה נביא הם, ואפילו ידעו צריך שיבקש כל הנביא, ולא כל עלמא מקרא נמירי, ומי שתניע ספר זה לידו, אין צריך לו לשרשי חקמיו, כי יש בו חשרשים מופק עליו המורה מקום מכל פסוקי חקמיו, לא יחסר עד אחד; סוף דבר בלעדיו לא הייתי יכול לעשות מה שעשיתי:

ובזהיות כי המסורה היה רב להדפיסו כל סביב חקמיו במקום שכבר הבאנו סימן א', פעם א', לא חשתי להביאו פעם אחרת, דמיון זה וישלח הם כ"ב, כתבתי אותם כולם פעם אחת בסדר נח בפסוק וישלח את היונה, כשהנתי את כן בוישלח אחד, לא רציתי להאריך לכתבו פעם אחרת, כי כבר נכתב ונחתם, אבל כתבתי הוא נמסר בסדר נח; ובנביאים בהיות שהם גדולים וכל נביא יש בו בכמותו בכמו כ"ה פעם, שיש בכל פרשה ופרשה, אם הייתי כותב נמסר בנביא פלוני לבר, היה יוצא שכרי בהפסדי, שלא היה באפשרות למצוא כי אם בקושי גדול, והיה המעין קץ בו, והיה מניחו מלבקשו, לכן הוצרכתי להשתמש בחלוקת הפרשיות, שהביא בספרו רבי יצחק נתן ספר הקונקורדנציה, and in such and such a verse. Had I at that time the Massoretic division of the chapters on the whole Bible I would have preferred it, but I did not get it till I had almost finished the work. I have, nevertheless, published it separately, so that it may not be lost to Israel.

⁷³ vid is the title of one of the Sabbatic lessons, comprising Gen. vi. 9-xi. 33; vide supra, p. 8, § xiv., note 12.

To make the Massorah perfect, I was obliged to rearrange the Massorah magna, for it was impossible to print it in the margin of the Bible, for it is too large; I have therein adopted the alphabetical order of the Aruch, to facilitate the reader. Moreover, all that we have printed of the Massorah magna in the margin of the Bible, I have also repeated a second time in the Massorah finalis, which I arranged alphabetically according to the example of the Aruch, but did not give it again entire; I have only repeated the beginning of the remarks. Thus, for instance, I said "the word ויִשָּׁב occurs fifteen times, as you will find in such and such a prophet and passage;" the same is the case with other observations which I have omitted, and this I have done designedly. Let an illustration suffice. If the student will examine a page of a prophetic or any other book of the Bible, he will find that it has generally ten or eleven verses; that there is not a verse which is without a Massoretic remark on a word or more, and that the Massorah parva notes every word upon which there is any Massorah, and says it occurs four, thirteen, or fifteen times; and that it was impossible to print the whole Massorah which belongs to that page; hence, when there are ten words on it which belongs to the Massorah, I only give four or five at most [in the Massorah marginalis], as the space of the page does not admit of more. Now the student, not knowing whether it is given in another place, or where to look for it, might think that this Bible has not all the Massorah which belongs to it. I have therefore been obliged to indicate in the root of the word in the Massorah magna, in what וכתבתי נמסר בנביא פלוני, בסימן פלוני, למען ידריך קורא בו, ואלו הייתי מוצא חלוקת הפרשיות שחלקו בעלי המסרה בכל המקרא, חייתי יותר הפך להשתמש ממנה מוולתה, ואחר כך הניעה לידי לאחד שכבר כמעט השלמתי, אמרתי להדפיסה גם היא, לבל תשכח ותאבד מישראל:

וכדי שיהיה המסורת שלם, הוצרכתי לתקן ולחדש אחר כך המסורת הגדולה, שאין באפשרות להדפיסה סביב שום ספר, כי היא בכמותה הרבה, וסדרתיה כדרך הערוך ממש, למען ידריך קורא בה: וכן כל מה שהרפסנו מהמסרה סביב העשרים וארבע דהיינו מהמסרה האמצעית, לא הגדולה הזוהית והבדלת אותה עם המסרה הגדולה שכדדתי כמו הערוך, ולא חשתי להביא כי אם ראשי פרקים, כגון וישב סו נמסר בנביא פלוני בסימן פלוני, וכן כל מה שנשמע וזה לכבד; המשל אם המעיין יעיין בנביא או זולתו, באותו העמוד יש י או יא פסוקים, בכל פסוק לא ימנע שלא תהיה בו חיבה ששייך בה מסורת, והמסרה קטנה היא בכל חיבה ששייך בה מסורת, ואומרת ד' או ל', או מ', וזה לא היה באפשר לכתוב המסורת כולו שהיה שייך לאותו דף, שאם היו שייכים י חיבות למסורת, הבאתי מהם ד' או ה' על הרוב, לדווקא רוחב העמוד, והמעיין לא ידע אם הם במקום אחד כבר נדפס, ובאיווה מקום הם כדי לבקשם במקומם, ויחשוב בלבו שאין בעשרים וארבע זה כל המסורת ששייך בו, לכן הוצרכתי לציין בשרש החיבה ההיא במסרה רבתא, באיווה part it is printed in such and such a prophet, and with what sign. I have also been obliged to repeat and state in the Massorah finalis many of the Massoretic remarks which the former editors have omitted in sundry places, because the page happened to be just as large as was required for printing the other matter. You therefore find it many a time stated in the margin of the Bible [i. e., Massorah marginalis], the Massorah on this passage is in the Massorah finalis. Wherever, also, the Massoretic remarks belonging to a certain page were so numerous as to render it impossible to give them in their proper place, which was too narrow, or wherever there were the alphabetical remarks of the Massorah magna which belonged to the same page, I always noted in the margin, "This is one of such and such an alphabet, and is noted in the Massorah finalis under such and such a letter," so that the student may easily find it. And you must not be astonished to find in the Massorah such language as, "It is noted in second or first Samuel, or second Kings, or second Chronicles," or to see Ezra and Nehemiah separated; for the author of the Concordance, who divided the law, prophets, and hagiographa into chapters, also divided Samuel, Kings, and Chronicles respectively into two books, and denominated Ezra the first ten chapters of the book, and the rest of the book he called Nehemiah; and as I have adopted the division of the Concordance, I thought it advisable to append to the end of this introduction a list of all the chapters, with the words with which they begin, and of their number in each book; so that if there crept in any mistakes in printing, they may easily be rectified by this list, printed at the end of the Introduction. We have printed in this Bible the number of every chapter, in order that the student may easily find the passage when the Massorah says, "It is noted in such a chapter."

Behold, I have exerted all my might and strength to collate and מקום נרפס בנביא פלוני, בסימן פלוני, וכן בהרבה מקומות השמימו חסרפטים הרבה מהסימנים לסיבה שארע להם להיות העמוד ארוך כדרך שארע למלאכה הרפוס, הוצרכתי לחזור ולחברם במסרה גדולה, ולכן ימצא הרבה פעמים כתוב סביבות העמוד, נמסר במסרה רבתי: וכן בסימנים הגדולים מל"ם וכו' שהיו שייכים לאותו עמוד שלא היה באפשר להרפיקם במקומם, יען היוחם ארוכים והעמוד היה קפון מהכיל כל הסימן, וכן בלאלפא ב'תות חסרה רבתי, שהיו שייכים בעמוד, נכתבו סביב העמוד במסרה זה, הוא חד מן א"ב פלוני, ונמסר במסרה רבתי במערכת אות פלוני, לכל ישיג שום מורה למעיין לבקש; ואין לחשוב כשימצא כתוב במסרה נמסר כשמואל ב', או חלק ב', או א', וכן במלכים ב', וכן ברה"ב, ובעזרא נ"ב בנחמיה; וזה כי מניח חלוקת פרשיות הרורה והנביאים והכרובים הכרוב בקונקורדנסיא חלק שמואל לב' חלקים, וכן מלכים ורה"ב ועזרא, עד דברי נחמיה בן חכלה משם ואילך קרא שמו נחמיה: ולזה טאחר שנחתמשנו בחלוקות וסימנים מחבר הקונקורדנסיא, אמרתי לכתוב אחר הקרמתי זאת כל החלוקות והסימנים הללו, שאם נהרפה נשמם איזה סימן בשנה, כבר יוכל לחקן מאחר שהם נרפסים אחר הקרמתי זאת, ובכ"ד זה בכל חלוקה וחלוקה הרפסנו חסימן ששייך, למען ירוץ קורא בו, למצוא מבוקשו, כשאומר במסורה נמסר בסימן פלוני:

הנה לא נמנע ממני בכל מאורי וכח

arrange the Massorah with all the possible improvements, in order that it may remain pure and bright, and show its splendour to the nations and princes; for, indeed, it is beautiful to look at. This was a labour of love for the benefit of our brethren, the children of Israel, and for the glory of our holy and perfect law, as well as to fulfil as far as possible the desire of Don Daniel Bomberg (may his book protect him!), whose expenses in this matter far exceed my labours. And as regards the Commentaries, I have exerted my powers to the utmost degree to correct in them all the mistakes as far as possible; and whatsoever my humble endeavours could accomplish was done for the glory of the Lord, and for the benefit of our people; and I would not be deterred by the enormous labour, for which cause I did not suffer my eyelids to be closed long, either in the winter or summer, and did not mind rising in the cold of the night, as my aim and desire were to see this holy work finished. Now praised be the Creator, who granted me the privilege to begin and to finish this work. Remember me, O my God, for good! Amen.

INDEX I.

PASSAGES OF SCRIPTURE REFERRED TO.

GENESIS.			Chap.	Ver.	Page.	Chap.	Ver.	Page.
Chap.	Ver.	Page.	xliii.	28	65	xxvii.	15	63
i.	1	71, 74, 75	xliv.	24	78	..	27	62
..	1-3	70	xliv.	6	70, 71	NUMBERS.
..	2	71	..	24	79	i.	1	69
..	4	75	EXODUS.			v.	13	54
..	7	75	iii.	5	73	..	14	54
..	26	70	..	8	73	vii.	1	59
..	27	70	..	17	73	xi.	15	68
ii.	2	70, 71	iv.	19	63	..	32	64
..	21-23	70	..	20	70, 71	xii.	3	64
..	22	70	vi.	11	78	..	12	68
v.	2	71	xii.-xxxv.	8	69	xiii.	29	73
vi.	7	70	..	40	70, 71	xvi.	15	70, 71
..	9	81	..	46	73, 74	xix.	15	76
viii.	7	78	xiii.	5	30, 73	xxii.	40	78
..	8	78, 81	..	16	61, 62	xxvii.	11	62, 63
..	12	78	xiv.	5	78	xxix.	19	60
xi.	7	70	xv.	7	69	..	31	60
..	93	81	xviii.	27	78	..	33	60
xii.	1	45	xix.	22	53	xxxi.	2	49
xiv.	2	45, 54	xxiii.	13	67	..	22	72
..	8	45	..	19	15	DEUTERONOMY.
xvii.	19	16	..	23	73	i.	1	50
..	27	45	..	28	73	iv.	19	71
xviii.	5	49, 67	..	28	73	v.	31	49
..	12	70, 71	xxiv.	5	53, 71	vi.	4	59
..	22	68	..	11	53, 71	..	8	61, 62
xix.	29	78	xxvii.	11	64	..	9	59
xx.	5	54	xxix.	29	31	vii.	1	73
xxi.	16	79	xxxiii.	2	73	x.	10	72
xxii.	20	78	xxxiv.	11	73	xi.	13	59
xxiv.	14	45	xxxix.	12	62	..	18	61, 62
..	16	45	LEVITICUS.			..	21	59
..	28	45	i.	1	30	..	30	72
..	55	45, 49	ii.	15	54	xiv.	7	70, 71
..	57	45	x.	16	15	xvii.	3	71
xxv.	6	59	xi.	6	70	xx.	17	73
..	27	62	..	16	71	xxii.	15	45
xxvii.	19	16	..	39	54	..	16	45
..	29	65	..	42	15	..	19	45
..	42	78	xii.	5	15	..	20	45
xxxi.	22	78	..	21	54	..	21	45
..	34	79	xiii.	10	54	..	23	45
xxxi.	4	64	..	33	15	..	24	45
xxxi.	3	45	xiv.	12	31	..	25	45
..	12	45	xv.	10	57	..	26	45
xxviii.	11	79	xvi.	31	54	..	27	45
..	13	78	xxi.	9	54	..	28	45
..	14	79	xxiii.	42	74	..	29	45
..	24	78	..	43	74
..	25	54

Chap.	Ver.	Page.
xxiii.	6	72
xxv.	7	71, 72
xxviii.	27	45, 51, 63
...	30	45, 51
xxxiii.	27	53
xxxiv.	12	5
xxxviii.	30	63

JOSHUA.

iii.	10	73
vi.	25	79
viii.	11	64
ix.	1	72, 73
x.	17	78
xi.	3	73
xii.	8	73
xvi.	3	64
xxiv.	11	30, 73
..	28	78

JUDGES.

ii.	6	78
iii.	5	73
..	18	78
ix.	25	78
..	47	78
x.	13	40
xi.	17	72
xv.	5	78
xvi.	31	58
xx.	13	50
xxi.	20	65

RUTH.

ii.	11	49
..	14	79
..	23	79
iii.	5	40, 49, 50
..	12	40, 49, 50
..	14	64
..	17	40, 49, 50

1 SAMUEL.

i.	9	16, 25
..	23	79
ii.	9	64
..	24	57, 58, 66
iii.	13	68
v.	6	45, 51, 63
..	9	45, 51, 63
..	12	45, 51, 63
vi.	4	45, 51, 63
..	5	45, 51, 63
..	17	63
vii.	9	65
x.	21	64
..	25	78
xi.	7	78
xii.	10	65
xiii.	19	65
xv.	12	78
xviii.	5	64
xix.	19	78

Chap.	Ver.	Page.
xxi.	14	64
xxiii.	5	64
..	7	78
xxv.	29	11
xxvii.	4	78
xxx.	26	78
xxxi.	4	72

2 SAMUEL.

i.	11	64
ii.	19	79
iii.	21	78
vi.	12	78
viii.	3	40, 49, 50
x.	17	78
xii.	20	64
xiii.	20	79
..	21	50
..	33	40, 50
xv.	31	40
xvi.	12	68
..	21	50
..	23	40, 49
xviii.	2	78
..	20	40, 50
xix.	2	78
xxi.	11	78
xxiv.	14	64
xxx.	33	40

1 KINGS.

i.	1	65
..	51	78
ii.	19	79
..	29	78
..	41	78
ix.	9	65
..	20	73
x.	5	64
xii.	7	65
..	16	68
xvii.	15	54
xviii.	42	64
xxii.	44	67

2 KINGS.

iv.	34	64
v.	9	64
..	18	40, 49, 50
..	24	78
vi.	13	78
..	25	51
viii.	7	78
x.	27	51
xi.	18	64
xvii.	25	78
..	26	78
xviii.	27	51
xix.	31	40
..	37	40, 50
xx.	18	65
xxii.	5	65
xxiv.	2	78

Chap.	Ver.	Page.
1	CHRONICLES.
xix.	17	78
xxv.	1	75
xxix.	16	54

2 CHRONICLES.

viii.	7	73
x.	16	68
xix.	17	78

EZRA.

iii.	2	65
iv.	7	64
ix.	1	73

NEHEMIAH.

ii.	6	51
iii.	30	65
..	31	65
viii.	8	48, 70
ix.	8	73
x.	1-10	37

ESTHER.

ii.	9	59
ix.	27	65

JOB.

vii.	20	68
xiv.	5	64
xv.	15	64
xx.	11	64
xxiv.	1	64
xxv.	14	64
xxix.	19	76
xxxi.	11	54
..	20	64
xxxii.	3	69
xxxvii.	12	64
xxxviii.	41	64
xxxix.	26	64
..	30	64
xl.	17	64

PSALMS.

v.	10	76
xxiv.	6	64
xxxvi.	7	49, 67
xl.	10	34
lviii.	8	64
lxxiii.	26	49, 67
lxxiii.	16	54
lxxvii.	38	15
lxxx.	14	15
lxxxi.	12	72
cv.	22	64
..	40	64
cvi.	15	78
..	20	68, 69
..	45	64
cxliv.	2	65
cxlvii.	19	64
cxlviii.	2	64

PROVERBS.
Chap.	Ver.	Page.
vi.	13	64
xxii.	25	64
xxiii.	35	77
xxvi.	24	64
xxv.	10	64
..	17	34
ECCLESIASTES.
ii.	11	64
v.	9	54
SONG OF SONGS.
ii.	11	64
v.	7	77
ISAIAH.
vii.	2	78
xiii.	16	45, 51, 63
xxx.	33	54
xxxvi.	12	51
xxxvii.	30	65
..	32	50
xlvi.	24	34
xlvi.	8	26
li.	16	80
lii.	5	64
lvi.	10	64
lvii.	2	36

JEREMIAH.
Chap.	Ver.	Page.
i.	5	62
ii.	11	68
..	24	57
iii.	2	45, 51, 63
v.	16	76
xv.	8	64
xvii.	11	64
xxvi.	1	74, 75
xxviii.	1	74, 75
xxx.	38	40, 49, 50
xxxviii.	16	40, 50
xxxix.	12	40, 50
..	14	26
xlvi.	7	65
l.	29	40, 49, 50
li.	3	40, 50
LAMENTATIONS.
iii.	19	69
..	39	64
EZEKIEL.
iii.	12	50
vii.	21	65
viii.	17	68
xvii.	21	64
xxxi.	5	64
xl.	22	64

Chap.	Ver.	Page.
xl.	26	64
xlvi.	11	64
xlvi.	16	16, 40, 49
DANIEL.
v.	21	65
xi.	15	65
HOSEA.
iv.	7	68
OBADIAH.
..	11	64
HABAKKUK.
i.	12	68
iii.	14	64
ZECHARIAH.
ii.	12	68
xiv.	2	45, 51
MALACHI.
i.	13	68

INDEX II.

TOPICS AND NAMES.

A

- ABARBANEL, see ABRAYANEL.
 ABRAYANEL, his opinion about the origin of the Keri and Kethiv, 44-47; refuted by Jacob b. Chajim, 50-52, 54.
 ABJA, Rabbi, 63, 71.
 ABOTH d' Rabbi Nathan, 54.
 ACHAH, Rabbi, 58, 71.
 ADRIKIND, Cornelius, 10.
 AIN, the middle letter in the Psalms, 15.
 AKIBA, Rabbi, 60.
 ALASHKAR, Moses b. Isaac, 2.
 ALTON, Chajim, 4, 38.
 ANTHROPOMORPHISMS, removed from the text, 68.
 ARAMA, 10.
 ARUCH, the, 40; different editions of, 41, 49, 51, 67; its definition, Itur Sopherim, 67, 82.

B

- BEN-ASHER, 7.
 BEN-NAPHTALI, 7.
 BENJAMIN of Tudela, 41.
 BERSHITH, Rabba, see MIDRASH.
 BIBLE, the Rabbinic, description of, 6, &c., 21, 40.
 BOMBERG, Daniel, establishes a Hebrew printing office at Venice, 4; his great expenses and work connected with the Rabbinic Bible, 8, 9, 41, 77, 78; engages Levita as corrector of the Hebrew works, 9; his publications, 10; suppresses Jacob b. Chajim's name in consequence of his embracing Christianity, 11, 14; parts with Jacob, 13.
 BUXTORF, 35.

C

- CASSEL, David, 10.
 CHARLES V., 9.
 CHRISTIANS charging the Jews with wilfully altering the text, 42; refutation of the charge, 66-71.
 CODICES, three, of the Temple, and their readings, 52, 53.
 CORECY, Moses de, 10.
 CROWNS, Book of, 61, 62.

D

- DELITZSCH, 24.
 DERENBURG, Dr., 25.

E

- EGIDIO, de Viterbo, Cardinal, befriends Levita, 9.
 ELDERS, 37.
 ELIEZER, Rabbi, 53.
 EPHODI, his view of the origin of the Keri and Kethiv, 42, 43; refuted, 55.
 ERSCH and Gruber's Encyklopädie, 10.
 ETHERIDGE, Dr., 41.
 EUPHEMISMS, substituted for cacophonous expressions, 51, 63.
 EZRA, author of the Keri and Kethiv, 44-47.

F

- FERRER, Vincente, preaches persecution of the Jews, 2.
 FERRERAS, 3.
 FRANKEL, Forstudien zu der Septuaginta, 71.
 FRENSDORFF, Dr., 11; his edition of the Ochla Ve-Ochla, 25, 26; declares that the Ochla Ve-Ochla is not the same as that used by Jacob b. Chajim, 27, 28.
 FUERST calls Jacob b. Chajim Tunisi, 1; erroneously asserts that Jacob b. Chajim's Introduction was published in English, by Kennicott, 6; his opinion about the date of the edition of Jacob b. Chajim's Treatise on the Targum, 10; his enumeration of Jacob b. Chajim's works, 10, 14; he regards the Ochla Ve-Ochla as lost, 25.

G

- GAON, 65.
 GEIGER, his opinion on the Commentaries ascribed to Ibn Ezra, 7; his description of the Massorah, 15; his charges against Ibn Adonijah of suppressing the materials, 17; refutation of the charges, 18-23; strictures on Frensdorff's remarks on the Ochla Ve-Ochla, 26; his fixing the date of the Ochla Ve-Ochla, 34; Urschrift und Uebersetzungen der Bibel, 49, 53, 69, 70, 71.
 GERSHON b. Jehodah, 24.
 GERUNDENSIS, Moses, see NACHMANIDES.
 GRAETZ, Geschichte der Juden, 24, 57.

H

- HALLE MS. of the Massorah, described 28-30; its relation to the printed Massorah of Jacob b. Chajim, 30, 31; to the Ochla Ve-Ochla, 31-33; its date, 34.
 HANNAEL, Rabbi, 48.
 HAPHTARA, see PENTATEUCH.
 HERETICS, see CHRISTIANS.
 HUNNAH, Joshua, 57, 59.
 HUFFELD, his description of the Halle MS. Massorah, 28.
 HAYDALAH, 75.

I

- IBN Adonijah, see JACOB BEN CHAJIM.
 IBN Alkin quotes the Ochla Ve-Ochla, 24, 25.
 IBN Chabib, Jacob, 10.
 IBN Ezra, 6, 7; commentaries ascribed to him, which belong to Moses Kimchi, 7; his rendering of Gen. i. 1-3, 70.
 IBN Shemtov, 10.
 IDA, Rabbi, 64.
 IKA, Rabbi b. Abaja, 48.
 ISAAC b. Jehudah quotes the Ochla Ve-Ochla, 24, 25.
 ——— b. Moses Ha-Levi, see EPHODI.
 ——— b. Asher, 57.
 ——— Rabbi, 48, 57.
 ISHMAEL Rabbi, 39, 53, 60, 61, 69.
 ITUR Sopherim, 42, 48, 49, 67, 68.

J

- JACOB b. Chajim, also called Ibn Adonijah, and Tunisi, probable date and place of his birth, 1, 2; emigrates from Tunis, 4; becomes connected with Bomberg, edits the Babylonian and the Jerusalem Talmuds, 1, 5, 38; the Hebrew Concordance of Nathan, the Jad Ha-Chezaka of Maimonides, 5; publishes the great Rabbinic Bible, 6; his treatise on the Targum, 9, 12, 13; his name suppressed, 11, 36; embraced Christianity, 11, 13, 14, 36; his death, 14; his description of the state of the Massorah, 19; the relation of his recension of the Massorah to the Ochla Ve-Ochla, 25-28; his labour connected with the Massorah, 20, 34, 35; refutes Abbravanel, 48; his opinion of the origin of the Keri and Kethiv, 56.
 JARCHI, see RASHI.
 JEHUDAH b. Nathan, called Riban, 57.
 ——— b. Bethara, 60.
 ——— Rabbi, 74.
 JEWS persecuted in Spain, 2.
 JONATHAN b. Uzziel, 6.
 JOSEPH the Blind, 7.

K

- KABBALAH, the, studied by Christians, 4, 9.

KAHANA, Rabbi, 71, 72.

KENNICOTT, edits a Latin version of Jacob b. Chajim's Introduction, 6.

KERI, the, always followed in reading the Scriptures, 44.

KERI and Kethiv, 40; its origin, 42, 69, 73; number of in each book of the Hebrew Scriptures, 47, 48.

KERI velo Kethiv, 40, 49, 55; number of, 50.

KETHIV velo Keri, 40, 47, 49, 55; number of, 50.

KIMCHI, David, 6, 7; quotes the Ochla Ve-Ochla, 24, 25; his opinion about the origin of the Keri and Kethiv, 43, 44; refuted, 55.

KIMCHI, Moses, author of commentaries ascribed to Ibn Ezra, 7.

L

LEBRECHT regards the Ochla Ve-Ochla as lost, 25.

LETTER, the middle in the Psalms, 15.

LEVI b. Gershon, see RALBAG.

LEVITTA calls Jacob b. Chajim Ibn Adonijah, 1; teaches Christians, 4; writes an epilogue to the Rabbinic Bible, 9; praises Ibn Adonijah; loses all his property at the sacking of Rome; goes to Venice, 9; his revision of works, 10; abuses Jacob b. Chajim for embracing Christianity, though he praises his literary works, 11, 23; his opinion about the duration of the Massorites, 15; his description of the state of the Massorah, 19, 20; affirms that the present compilation of the Massorah made by Jacob b. Chajim is chiefly from the Ochla Ve-Ochla, 23-25, 26-28.

LUZZATTO, 10; his declaration that Jacob b. Chajim did embrace Christianity, 11-13.

M

MAHARAM, see MEIER of Rottenburg.

MAIMONIDES, his legal code called Jad Ha-Chezaka, 5, 59; his More Nebuchim, 52.

MARTINEZ, Fernando, preaches persecution of the Jews, 2.

MASSORAH, 14; its meaning, 15; origin and import, 15-17; its condition, 7, 8, 19, 41; its utility, 72, &c.

——— finalis, 6, 7, 40, 41, 82, 83.

——— magna, 6, 16, 40; divided into two parts, 32, 83.

——— marginalis, 6, 19, 40, 79, 83.

——— parva, 6, 16, 18, 40.

——— the Great, 24; how treated by the Scribes, 78, 79.

MASSORITES, their duration, 15, 16.

MASSORETIC order of the Books in the Bible, 26; treatises, 16, 17, 78.

N

MASSORETIC sign explained, 72, 73.

MECHILTA, 10, 69, 71.

MEIER, of Rottenburg, 77.

—— b. Samuel, 57.

—— Rabbi, 59, 60.

MICHAELIS, 35.

MIDRASH Rabbith, 10, 59, 64.

—— Ruth, 37.

—— Tanchuma, 10.

—— Tilim, 10.

MISHRACHI, Elias, 10.

MOORS, crusade against them, 2.

MORDECAI b. Hillel, 76, 77.

MORINUS, 35.

MOSES, the Punctuator, or Ha-Nakdan, 7, 13.

—— b. Nachman, see RAMBAN.

MEZUZAH, 59.

MOZARQUIVER captured by the Spaniards, 23.

N

NACHMANIDES, see RAMBAN.

NATHAN, Isaac, 5, 80, 81.

—— b. Jechiel, 41.

NAVARRO, Pedro, conquers Bugia, 4.

NEHEMIAH, Rabbi, 53.

NEUBAUER, 24.

NORZI, Salomon, 24, 25.

O

OCHLA VE-OCHLA, origin of its name, 16, 17, 19; declared by Levita to be the basis of the present Massorah, refuted, 23, 24, 26, 27; whether it is the identical one quoted by Kimchi, Ibn Aknim, Isaac b. Jehudah, Elias Levita, 25; is edited by Dr. Frensdorff, 26; its relation to the Massorah of Jacob b. Chajim, 25-27; to the Ochla Ve-Ochla quoted by the medieval lexicographers, 28; its age, 33, 34; Frensdorff's edition quoted, 45, 49, 50, 51, 64, 65, 69.

ONKELOS, 6.

P

PAPA, Rabbi, 59.

PARIS Massorah, edited under the name of Ochla Ve-Ochla, see FRENSDORFF and Ochla Ve-Ochla.

PENTATEUCH, the, divided into Sabbatic lessons, the manner in which it is quoted in Jewish writings, 45.

PESICTA Sutrata, 10.

PHYLACTERIES, 61.

PINSKER, 69.

PIZZIGHTONE, David de, 5.

PLATO, 70.

POLYGLOTT, Complutensian, 3, 22.

PRESCOTT, 3.

PROPHIAT Duran, see EPHODI.

PTOLEMY, king, 69.

R

RAB, 48.

RABE, 71, 72.

RABBINIC BIBLE, see BIBLE.

RALBAG, also called Rabbi Levi b. Gershon, 6, 7, 10.

RAMBAM, see MAIMONIDES.

RAMBAN, also called Moses b. Nachman, of Nachmanides, 10, 39, 40, 56.

RASHBA, 55.

RASHBAM, 39, 40, 57.

RASHBAN, also called R. Samuel b. Meier, 39, 40, 57.

RASHI, 6, 7, 24, 34, 49, 50, 51; his interpretation of 1 Samuel ii. 24; differs from the Massoretic text, 57-59, 60, 61, 63, 64, 65, 66, 70.

RAYMOND Martin, 67.

REDAK, see KIMCHI.

REFORMATION, 6.

REIFMANN, his opinion on the commentaries ascribed to Ibn Ezra, 7.

RIBA, see ISAAC B. ASHER.

RIBAN, see JEHUDAH B. NATHAN.

ROSSI, Azzariah de, his date, calls Jacob b. Chajim Ibn Adonijah, 1.

ROTTENBURG, Meier, 76.

RULES, exegetical, 60-63.

S

SAADIA GAON, 7, 34, 64, 65.

SABBA, Abraham, 10.

SABBATICAL lessons, see PENTATEUCH.

SACCUTTO, Abraham, 2; emigrates from Tunis 4.

SALOMON, b. Abraham b. Adereth, 10.

—— b. Isaac, see RASHI.

—— b. Jehudah, see NORZI.

SAMARITANS, the, refuse to adopt the revision of the text, 53.

SAMUEL, b. Meier, see RASHBAM.

—— Mar, 59.

—— Rabbi, 57.

SCRIBES, see SOPHERIM.

SEPTUAGINT, the, 69.

SHIMSHON b. Abraham, 12.

SIMEON, Rabbi, 74.

SIMON, the Just, 37.

—— b. Lakish, 52.

SIPHRA, 10.

SIPHERI, 10.

SOAVE, Moses, 12.

SOPHERIM, the origin of their name, 15, 43; members of the Great Synagogue, 37; authors of the Keri and Kethiv, 43; their emendations of the text, 42, 48, 49, 67-69.

SPAIN, expulsion of the Jews from, 2.

STEINSCHNEIDER, 10, 17, 24, 41.

SYNAGOGUE, the Great, its origin and constitution, 37; the members thereof, the compilers of the Hebrew canon, the Book of Esther, &c, 37, 38; the authors of the Keri and Kethiv, 42, 43, 70.

T

TAM, 57, 62, 63.

TAGIN, Sopher, see BOOK OF CROWNS.

TALAVERA, Fray Fernando de, 2.

TALMUD, the, editio princeps of, 5; its explanation of Nehemiah viii. 8, 48; differences between it and the Massorah, 42, 57, 58, 63, 64, 65; the different Tracts of it quoted:—

Baba Mezia, 54 b	62, 63.
Baba Bathra, 111.	63.
Erechin, 17 a	74, 75.
Gittin, 86	67.
Jebamoth, 106 b	66, 71, 72.
— 13 b	53.
— Jerusalem, i. 6	53.
Kethuboth, 104 a	36.
Kiddushin, 30 a	15.
Megilla, Jerusalem, i. 11	53.
— 9 a	71.
— 24 b	63.
— 25 b	45, 51.
Menachoth, 84 a b	59, 61, 62.
Maccoth, Jerusalem, ii. 7	39.
Nedarim, 37 b	48, 49, 55, 57, 70, 71.
Nidda, 33 a	57.
Pessachim, 16 b	74.
— 103 b ,—104 a , 75, 76.
Rosh Ha-Shana, 4	32.
Sabbath, 55 b	57, 59.
— 103 b	60.
Sanhedrin, 4 b	60.
Shebiith, Jerusalem, v. 1	37.
Sopherim vii. 1	65.
— vi. 4	52, 53, 55.
— vi. 8	50.
— vi. 9	50.
— vii. 2	53.

Sopherim viii. 8 45.

— ix. 9 51.

Sota, 20 a 39.Succa, 6 b 74.— 46 b 61.Taanith, 4 b 61.

Taharoth 12.

Zebachim, 24 b 62.— 115 b 53.

— Mishna, xiv. 4 53.

TIKUN Sopherim, 42 48, 68, 69.

TOSSAFOTH, 57, 58; mentions variations between the readings of the Talmud and the Massorah, argues from the Massorah against the Talmud, 60-63, 71, 72, 74.

TUNIS, the supposed birth-place of Jacob b. Chajim, 2, 3.

TUNISI, see JACOB B. CHAJIM.

V

VAV, the middle in the Pentateuch, 15.

VERSE, the middle in the Pentateuch, 15; in the Psalms, 15.

W

WEISS, his commentary on the Mechilta, 71.

WORD, the middle in the Pentateuch, 15.

X

XIMENES, Cardinal, goes to Granada to convert the Mussulmans, 2; causes the destruction of Arabic MSS, 3; triumphantly enters Oran, 4; does not describe the materials used in the Complutensian Polyglott, 22, 23.

Z

ZUNZ, 24, 41.

WORKS BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

THE SONG OF SONGS, with an Historical and Critical Commentary.—Price 10s. London: Longmans, Green, Reader, and Dyer.

"Its poetical beauty has certainly not been impaired in Mr. Ginsburg's hands. . . . Much of what Mr. Ginsburg has done is so good, and the class of works so completely deserves encouragement, that we shall be glad if the success of his first effort encourages him to continue his biblical labours."—Saturday Review.

"Whoso is tempted by its luscious light, streaming through laden vine-boughs, 'dripping odours, dripping wine,' that would gaze on the tessellated floors of ivory palaces, and pierce through silken lattices into chambers dedicated to a bridal, that would crush spikenard and musk under his feet, and listen to the voice of bridegroom and bride, let him turn to these pages, and learn all the curious lore which a sedulous and erudite scholar has amassed to illustrate this new translation of the story of the Shulamite."—Athenæum.

COHELETH, commonly called THE BOOK OF ECCLESIASTES, Translated from the Original Hebrew, with a Commentary, Historical and Critical.—Price 18s. London: Longmans, Green, Reader, and Dyer.

"Anything so complete and important has never appeared before in our language upon the Book of Ecclesiastes. We can readily understand that the author has bestowed seven years' labour upon it; and we cannot too strongly praise his diligence, research, and learning."—Clerical Journal.

"A valuable contribution both to its exegesis and its literary history. . . . The opinions of so competent a Hebrew scholar as Mr. Ginsburg cannot be consulted without profit, even though they may not be correct in every instance."—The Literary Churchman.

"The notes are replete with good sense as well as learning, and the main points for discussion are brought out in the introduction with a clear and masterly hand."—The Spectator.

"The work is the acutest, the fairest, the most learned, every way the ablest and most trustworthy work on Ecclesiastes in our language, and perhaps the best in any language."—The Critic.

"This is one of those learned efforts of Biblical criticism into which the laborious intellect of Germany has for some time thrown itself with so much earnestness of purpose."—John Bull.

THE ESSENES; THEIR HISTORY AND DOCTRINES.
An Essay, Reprinted from the Transactions of the Literary and Philosophical Society of Liverpool.—Price 2s. London: Longmans, Green, Reader, and Dyer.

"This is certainly a very good account of that remarkable sect, whose peculiarities elicited a measure of admiration even from the Greeks and Romans, and exercised some influence upon Christianity. Dr. Ginsburg is of opinion that the common sources of information are not ample enough to enable us to understand sufficiently the doctrines and habits of the Essenes; and accordingly he professes to furnish a more complete and accurate account, founded upon his researches among ancient and modern authors."—English Churchman.

"Dr. Ginsburg's paper on The Essenes, their History and Doctrines, . . . is an exhaustive essay, on a subject on which it is curious that there should be so much obscurity."—Guardian.

"The book will be valuable as a manual for reference, in consequence of its numerous facts; and students of Hebrew and Christian antiquities should have it at hand."—Journal of Sacred Literature.

THE KABBALAH: its Doctrines, Development, and Literature. An Essay read before the Literary and Philosophical Society of Liverpool, October 19, 1863, and reprinted with the Society's permission.—Price 7s. 6d. London: Longmans, Green, Reader, and Dyer.

THE MASSORETH HA-MASSORETH of ELIAS LEVITA, in Hebrew, with an English Translation, and Explanatory Notes.—Price 21s. London: Longmans. 1867.

"The work will be a welcome addition to the libraries of all sound Hebraists, and we should be glad to hear that its laborious editor was engaged on a scientific treatise, making the whole subject of Massoretic criticism available to European scholars."—The London Review.

"Dr. Ginsburg's translation of El'as Levita on the 'Massoreth,' is a work of the greatest utility to the Hebrew student."—Westminster Review.

"The Introduction by Dr. Ginsburg is exceedingly interesting, and very valuable in the present state of Hebrew literature in this country. We have here the history of the life and times of Elias Levita, and a most instructive résumé of the literature of that period. The translation is free, easy, natural; the notes are brief, pointed, practical, and give evidence of the most comprehensive and detailed acquaintance with the whole subject. Several important errors are corrected, which mar even our most recent authorities. We feel assured that many Hebrew scholars, who have hitherto been satisfied with modern scientific helps, will gratefully avail themselves of the present means of making their acquaintance with the old native authorities, and that as many as will make the attempt will not be disappointed."—The English Independent.

"We must heartily thank Dr. Ginsburg for this befitting companion to Jacob ben Chajim, and the Kabbalah. The value of the volume before us is greatly enhanced by the fact that the present is the only reliable and complete translation of the work; the two which exist, the one in Latin, and the other in German, being exceedingly imperfect. The Introduction is replete with the most valuable and interesting information. We have a concise and clear account of the life and times of Elias Levita, and a most instructive résumé of the literature of that period. It furnishes numerous corrections of errors which mar some of our most recent information upon the subjects in hand. The translation is clear, easy, and natural. Semitic scholars, who have hitherto been satisfied with modern scientific aids, by the help furnished them here will be able successfully to wade through the intricacies of the old native authorities. . . . We feel assured that the present work will be a most welcome addition to the library of every sound Hebraist."—British Quarterly Review.

"We offer hearty thanks to Dr. Ginsburg, who gives us books that can bring no adequate reward to their author, but can and will establish his claim to the remembrance and gratitude of scholars universally."—The Nonconformist.

"Such scholarship as Dr. Ginsburg's will always be rare: it requires historical and other conditions which are not often to be found together. All the more highly let it be set store by when it does present itself. For ourselves, we are grateful to Dr. Ginsburg both for his studies and for the fruit of them; and we receive his English Levita as one of the best contributions which recent years have made to the cause of Hebrew learning and of Old Testament criticism, whether in this or any other country."—The London Review.

JACOB BEN CHAJIM'S INTRODUCTION TO THE RABBINIC BIBLE, Hebrew and English; with Explanatory Notes. Second Edition, much enlarged.—Price 7s. 6d. London: Longmans, Green, Reader, and Dyer.

"This is a valuable and curious contribution to Biblical literature."—Clerical Journal.

SEP 13 1964

374

יהוה

INSTITVTIO THEOLOGICA

ANDOVER FVNDATA MDCCCVII.

ΑΚΡΟΓΩΝΙΣ

ΣΟΥ ΧΡΙΣΤΟΥ

ANDOVER-HARVARD LIBRARY

AH 5MNI 9

Harvard Depository
Brittle Book

JACOB IBN ADONIJAH'S
INTRODUCTION
TO THE RABBINIC BIBLE, HEBREW AND ENGLISH
BY CHRISTIAN D. GINSBURG, LL.D.